SAYS MR. BERRY SOUGHT LIQUOR AGENT'S SUPPORT

Visited James Mulvihill, at Allentown, Charges Mayor Liebel.

FRIENDS ARE SHOCKED

Supporters of Local Optionist Surprised at Allegations of Chief Executive of Erie, Who Says He is for Grim for Governor.

That William H. Berry, the Keystone party and local option candidate for Governor, sought the support of James Mulvihill, the so-called agent of the liquor interests of Pennsylvania, in his effort to capture the nomination at the Allentown convention, is the sensational charge made by Mayor Michael Liebel, Jr., of Erie. Mayor Liebel's charge is so serious as to come as a distinct shock to local optionists throughout the State. It will be recalled that Mayor Liebel was actively mentioned for the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor, at Allentown, and that he declined in order that he might serve out his term at Erie. Regarding Mr. Berry, Mayor Liebel said:

"I charge William H. Berry with insincerity, with duplicity in his mad hunt for office and a woeful lack of appreciation of the obligations which one candidate owes another when they submit their names to a convention with the implied understanding that the one receiving a majority vote shall be recognized as the party standard bearer.

"Mr. Berry, as an avowed local optionist, surprised friend and foe when he called upon James Mulvihill, the reputed leader of the liquor interests of Pennsylvania at Allentown, when the Democratic delegates were considering the availability of the several candidates for Governor and solicited his support and that of his associates who are pronounced opponents of the local option idea in the treatment of the question of the sale of liquor.

"I am advised that Mr. Berry was closeted with Mr. Mulvihill at Allentown for more than half an hour, and that in return for the solicited support of Mr. Mulvihill and his friends, Mr. Berry promised that in the event of his election to the Governorship he would not use the power of his office to further the cause of local option upon the liquor question and that he would abide by the action of a majority of the members of the Legislature upon the subject.

"How Mr. Berry can reconcile his attitude today, running upon a platform which calls for absolute local option and the position he assumed in the private room of Mr. Mulvihill, declaring neutrality upon the liquor issue in the event of his being elevated to the office of Governor, is something which the voters of Pennsylvania will have to pass upon.

"If Mr. Berry will tell exactly what passed between him and Mr. Mulvihill at Allentown when they were in secret conference his local option associates and those who are satisfied with the present license law will be pleased to learn all he has to say upon the subject.

"For a long time I have had my opinion of Mr. Berry and his efforts to win political office through various channels and by the advocacy of various policies.

"I have seen him run for office as a free silverite, I have seen him espouse the cause of Prohibition, I have seen him as a stout champion of the principles of and teaching of William Jennings Bryan, and I have seen him figure both as a Democratic and a local option candidate before the people, but I never expected to find him running as a candidate for Governor upon a platform calling for local option, after secretly seeking the support of the liquor interests and making pledges to refrain from exerting the power of the office of Governor to promote local option legislation if he would be given the backing of the liquor interests to advance his candidacy for that office.

"Mr. Berry permitted his name to go before the Allentown convention. He lost upon a clean-cut issue, and Webster Grim defeated him for Governor by an overwhelming majority. Mr. Grim and others who were present at the time say that Mr. Berry, after the convention adjourned, went up to his successful opponent and congratulated him and assured him of his support for the election.

"Mr. Berry has not only repudiated this pledge, but he has essayed to make a canvass for the Governorship upon a local option platform, which under ordinary conditions would commit him to that policy.

"After his meeting with the so-called representative of the liquor interests, I

CAUGHT TRYING TO STEAL HAD LOADED REVOLVER

Was Attempting to Rob Lauderbach-Barber Co. Store.

WAS NOT HIS FIRST JOB

Young Man Figured in Robbery of Fuel & Supply Company Office One Year Ago—Arrest Was Made Late on Monday Night.

Armed with a loaded revolver, Joseph Wagner, aged 19 years, was caught and arrested Monday night while attempting to break into the Bellefonte store of Lauderbach-Barber Company. The arrest was made by Chief of Police Dukeman.

Wagner was given a hearing yesterday before Burgess Bower, who bound him over under $500 to keep the peace. Wagner was also ordered to keep off the streets after 10 o'clock at night. He was implicated in the robbery of the office of the Bellefonte Fuel and Supply Company about one year ago.

The timely arrival of Policeman Dukeman spoiled Wagner's plans for effecting an entrance to the Lauderbach-Barber Company store. Ever since the recent robberies in Bellefonte, Policeman Dukeman has been watching out for a reappearance of the thieves. On Monday night, shortly after midnight, he happened to be in the vicinity of "The Republican" office when he heard a suspicious noise. Upon investigation he discovered a man in the act of prying off a board which covers an open window of the Lauderbach-Barber Company store, in that part of the building directly opposite from the Palace Livery.

Wagner was too intently at work to observe Policeman Dukeman as the latter quietly made his way along the alley between the store and "The Republican" office. Almost before he realized that he had been detected, Wagner was placed under arrest. On being searched a loaded revolver was found in his pocket. He also had a pair of pincers, and a bunch of keys.

GRANGERS NOT FOR BERRY

"Farmer" Creasy Failed to Secure Indorsement of Keystone Man.

According to Harrisburg dispatches yesterday it seems that the recent meeting there of the State Grange accorded a chilly reception to a suggestion by "Farmer" William T. Creasy that the grangers indorse the candidacy of William H. Berry for Governor on the Keystone party ticket. Creasy did not make public that fact at the time of the meeting. The facts, however, have since leaked out.

Creasy, it appears, offered a resolution indorsing Berry, but this met with a storm of protest and he was forced to withdraw his resolution rather than have it go to a vote with one or two persons supporting it. The opposition to the suggestion was overwhelming. Creasy thereupon pocketed the resolution and said nothing about it when the meeting adjourned.

Hospital Notes.

Mrs. Ella Gordon, Mrs. Bertha Steele, Mrs. Laura Young and Miss Grace Rowan, of Bellefonte; admitted for treatment.

Mrs. Mary Forner, of Colyer, admitted for treatment.

Mrs. Emma Minnemeyer, of Coleville; admitted for treatment.

Edward Martz, Miss Mary Ward, of Pine Grove Mills; admitted for treatment.

Miss Milicent Prince, of Pittsburg; operation for appendicitis.

Elmer Croel, of Milesburg; operation.

Mrs. Ella Heckman, of Spring Mills; admitted for treatment.

Moose Lodge Officers.

At the national convention of the Lodge of Moose, held this week in Baltimore, the following officers were elected: E. E. Tanner, Columbus, Ohio, supreme dictator, Arthur H. Jones, Pittsburg, supreme vice dictator; Ralph H. Donges, Camden, N. J., supreme prelate; B. F. Crawford, Pittsburg, supreme treasurer; John Ross, Kalamazoo, Mich., supreme sergeant-at-arms; E. B. Winsett, Oklahoma, supreme outer guard; H. Y. Davis, Cleveland, supreme councilman; L. L. Moore, Seattle, supreme trustee.

School Dedication Sept. 16.

The dedication of the new High School building, in Bellefonte, will be held on Friday, September 16. The exercises originally were planned for tomorrow, August 26, but were postponed owing to the inability of several speakers to attend.

To The Merchants of Bellefonte:

This is a friendly talk with the merchants of Bellefonte. It is prompted by a conviction based on personal talks, covering a number of months, with some of the foremost business men in the town.

Gradually, but nevertheless just as certainly as the sun rises, the "country business" is drifting away from Bellefonte merchants and to the stores located in the smaller towns in the county or to the mail order houses in the cities.

There is not a merchant in Bellefonte but what knows this to be true. Not a few frankly admit it. Others know that is true but try to fool themselves into believing that it isn't.

If any proof is needed it is shown in the development of character of the stores in the towns within a few miles of Bellefonte. From the more or less small and modest affairs of a few years ago, they have expanded and branched out until they aim to compete with the merchant of the larger town. In a word, they have taken advantage of a situation created, not by them, but by the Bellefonte merchants. Their enterprise and shrewdness compel admiration.

That the policy of Bellefonte merchants in closing their stores at 6 o'clock in the evening is partly responsible for this drift of the farmers' trade to the stores of the smaller towns is the honest judgment of many. There are some who don't think so. The latter class are just as honest and sincere in this belief as the class who hold to the opposite view. Which class are in the right?

Let us take up the argument of those merchants who believe that no trade is lost by early closing. One of the number advances the argument that even though the stores remained open in the evening they would not do enough business "to pay for the cost of the light used." By another it is contended that nothing is lost because "conditions are so different from what they were in the old days." In other words, the small town stores today carry a larger and more varied stock than they did a few years ago.

A third merchant, and one who honestly believes in the theory of early closing, gives it as his view that "the farmers have got out of the habit of coming to Bellefonte to do their dealing."

Unconsciously, perhaps, but squarely hitting the mark the last mentioned merchant accurately sizes up the situation. Many of the farmers who once made regular weekly visits to Bellefonte to do their purchasing have "got out of the habit."

Why?

The question is one which confronts every merchant in Bellefonte. It is vital to his future business, for say what you will the backbone of the business of Bellefonte merchants is that which is contributed, directly or indirectly, by the farmers. No more desirable class of trade than the farmers could be had. In the time of depression the farmer is better able to pay cash for his purchases than the man who is employed in the mill or factory. The merchant is not compelled to extend credit to the farmer and getting cash for what he sells is able to buy with advantage from the wholesaler. The man who works in the mill or factory is just as honest as the farmer, but in hard times work is slack, wages are necessarily reduced and he is compelled, against his will, to ask his merchant for credit.

Let us note what the small town stores are doing. Are they closing in the evening? It is indeed a slow competitor who thinks they are. On the contrary, we find the small town stores not only keeping open in the evenings but ADVERTISING THAT THEY WILL REMAIN OPEN AS LONG AS DESIRED. Moreover, they are emphasizing the fact that farmers may drive to Bellefonte in the evening and find the stores closed and have their trip for nothing, but they may drive to the small town store and BE SURE TO FIND IT OPEN.

Why is the small town merchant calling attention to this if it is not to his advantage. It is to his advantage and he must be commended for sufficient business brains to go after and capture the business.

In a word, the small town stores are educating the farmers of Centre County to patronize them and get out of the habit of doing their business in Bellefonte. Is there a merchant in Bellefonte who can figure anything else out of it? If so, we would like to hear his argument. There may be some who do not think so, but the majority DO THINK SO.

What is the remedy? How is this trade to be diverted back to Bellefonte?

One suggestion is that the merchants of Bellefonte undertake a campaign of education to get the farmers into the habit of coming to Bellefonte. Candor compels the statement that today Bellefonte offers very few inducements to the farmer to do his business here and keep in the habit of coming here. Time was when pretty nearly any Saturday witnessed the green between the Court House and the jail filled with farmers' rigs. Today it keeps the farmer busy finding a convenient hitching post in town where his team will be safe until he is ready to start home. There are a few hitching posts in town, it is true, but it is equally true that this lamentably small number are considered offensive to the aesthetic taste of a few persons who want Bellefonte run on the basis of a large city.

This thing of trying to make a town of 4,000 or 5,000 population fit into the lines of the metropolitan city is in large measure responsible for the drifting away of the farmer. The early closing plan was proposed here with the argument in its behalf that all large cities closed their stores at 6 o'clock. Already it is proposed that next year Bellefonte close her stores at noon during the summer, "because it is done in the cities."

The city merchant who closes his store at 6 o'clock in the evening does not need the patronage of the farmer. The greater population of the city makes up for this difference. Not so with the small town. Here the local trade is limited according to the population of the town. Anything more than that must come from the farmer. Does it not stand to reason that the merchants who get the town trade and also the farmers' trade have greater profits than those who get the town trade only?

For the sake of argument, suppose the Bellefonte merchants undertake to educate the farmers of the county into coming to Bellefonte to transact their business. We will consider the declaration of the merchant who believes that if he remained open in the evening he "wouldn't make the cost of his light." Perhaps he wouldn't until the farmers got back into the habit of coming to town, and this they never will do until they know before starting from home that there is something here to make the trip worth while. Is it not entirely reasonable to suppose that in the course of a few months the merchant would be able to make more than enough to pay for the light used? More important than this, would not that merchant be doing something to build up his trade or at least hold what he has and keep it from drifting away from him? Once the farmer gets into the habit of buying during the evenings at the small town stores it isn't long until he does all of his buying there. The farmer, just like every other person, is going to buy where he secures the best accommodation, and by this is meant quality, variety and convenience in hours.

We gathered a vast fund of information a day or two ago in a talk with a

BUSINESS MEN'S PICNIC WAS SPLENDID SUCCESS

Annual Outing at Hecla Attended By Record-Breaking Crowd.

WEATHER WAS PERFECT

Although Thousands of Persons Visited Park Not An Accident Was Reported —Tribute to Efficiency of Central Railroad Trainmen.

Ideal weather and a record-breaking crowd contributed much to the success of the big business men's picnic, at Hecla Park, on Tuesday. As in former years, it brought together hundreds of business men from Centre and Clinton counties and made possible an outing for numerous families and their friends.

Threatening clouds on Monday evening caused no little concern among the scores of families who had their baskets packed in readiness for the first trains to the park on Tuesday. The proverbial good luck of this big annual event did not fail when it came to a test and Tuesday loomed up bright and clear. It so happens that the business men's picnic has never been postponed by rain. On several occasions the day has been attended by showers, but in no year has rain early in the day kept the crowds away from the park. This year rain was threatened but it did not materialize and all present were able to enjoy themselves to the fullest.

The diversions in the form of amusements and other attractions were in keeping with the high standard of previous years. There was little or no disorder. One or two men forgot themselves or were provoked into "scraps" but in each instance the principals were quickly hustled off the grounds and the disorder instantly checked.

As a tribute to the care and efficiency of the engineers, conductors and brakemen on the Central Railroad is the fact that despite the large crowds handled from morning until night, not a single accident was reported. This record for the trainmen is one of which they may be justly proud.

For the baseball "fan" the most interesting features of the day were the games between Bellefonte and Philipsburg. Bellefonte won both morning and afternoon games, the former by the score of 7—1 and the latter, 2—1. A large crowd attended both games.

By means of a "tag day" program—the selling of neatly printed tags by young ladies for the benefit of the Bellefonte baseball club—a considerable sum was raised.

MR. PATTON HERE

Republican Nominee for Congress Greets Many Friends.

Charles E. Patton, of Curwensville, the Republican nominee for Congress in this district, was a Bellefonte visitor, yesterday stopping over for a few hours to greet his numerous friends. While in town Mr. Patton called at "The Republican" office. He said that he was greatly pleased with the assurance of support received on all sides and the evidence of party harmony in every county in the district. Mr. Patton is entirely confident of victory at the polls in November.

On Tuesday Mr. Patton spent several hours greeting friends at the business men's picnic.

Awarded Bridge Contracts.

The firm of Rhoads and Knisely is to be congratulated on its success in being awarded the contracts for the building of two county bridges. Both awards were made by County Commissioners Woodring, Zimmerman and Dunlap on Thursday, last, for a total of $4,355. One is the Ames bridge, is on the road from Lemont to Houserville, in College township, the award being for $2,558. The other bridge is to be built over Bush Hollow run, on the road between Milesburg and Unionville, in Union township, at a cost of $1,797. There were a number of bidders for the work. It is a matter of gratification that the successful bidder is a Bellefonte firm. Equally gratifying is the fact that the work will be done under the personal supervision of Mr. Rhoads and Mr. Knisely.

Blanchard Man Hurt.

William T. Fowler, one of the best known and most highly respected residents of Blanchard, met with a quite serious accident last week while at work at Benjamin Brown's sawmill. A falling log struck him on the leg. He paid no attention to the injury until his leg finally begun to give him considerable pain. Then it developed that a small bone had been broken and that this had caused symptoms of blood poisoning.

PUBLISHERS TO CHECK "DEAD-HEAD" READERS

Hold Meeting to Discuss Conditions Created By Postal Laws.

ONE DELINQUENT LIST

To be Compiled Ooctober 1 and to Contain Name of Every Person Who Has Refused to Pay for Any Centre County Newspaper.

A meeting of the publishers of Centre County newspapers was held in Bellefonte, on Friday, last, to discuss new conditions created by the recently enforced postal regulations. Since publishers have been compelled to drop from their subscription lists all persons in arrears more than twelve months, there has been more or less confusion in the public mind as to the exact situation, as it affects both the reader and the publisher.

In some instances persons dropped by one newspaper have deliberately ignored their delinquent account there and cooly walked into some other newspaper office and by paying $1 became enrolled as subscribers of that newspaper. They refused to pay their debt with the one newspaper and have started around the circle of county newspapers by subscribing for another. One of the purposes of the meeting of publishers was to consider plans for heading off the dead-beat subscriber, the fellow who in time would beat every newspaper in the county.

It was decided by the several publishers to prepare a list of their delinquents and to submit the same not later than October 1, at which time a general list will be compiled showing the name of every person who has refused to pay for his newspaper. A copy of this list will be furnished to every publisher in the county so that he may learn at a glance who are the people in the county who try to slide along without paying legitimate bills.

Every newspaper in Centre County has had the same experience since the enforcement of the new postal regulations. Some delinquents have become angry and stopped their paper. They resented the fact that they were asked to pay what they owed. A few pretended to regard the publishers' announcements as a scheme to aid collections and they, too, became offended and, of course, stopped their paper.

We are glad to note, however, that the percentage of subscribers who assume anger as a scheme for repudiating a just debt is very small.

The postal laws in regard to newspapers and newspaper debts are quite clear: No one need accept a newspaper, if he doesn't want it, provided he has settled up his old account. Once a delinquent has paid up he need simply refuse to lift his paper. He must, however, pay up. If he lifts his newspaper he is liable for the account, and the courts have so interpreted the law.

Under the plans formulated by the Centre County publishers it will no longer be possible for a person to make the rounds, beating one newspaper after another. Once a person beats any one newspaper that fact will become known to every other publisher. As a consequence, the dishonest subscriber will not be able to beat more than one newspaper.

As will be readily seen, this plan aims to protect the great majority of newspaper readers who promptly pay their bills. It also aims at that undesirable class who subscribe for newspapers and have no thought of paying for them.

At last week's meeting publishers were in attendance representing the "Watchman", "Keystone Gazette", "Centre Democrat", "State College Times", and "Centre Hall Reporter" and "The Republican." The publishers of the "Millheim Journal" and "Howard Hustler" were unable to attend but sent word that they would cooperate in the action taken.

Stepped on Needle.

Mrs. R. B. Taylor, wife of the contractor, met with a painful experience this week. While attending to her household duties, she stepped on a needle, the sharp pointed piece of steel sinking deeply into her foot. She was removed to the Bellefonte hospital, where the needle was removed.

Lost Bunch of Keys.

J. Homer Decker, assistant clerk to the County Commissioners, on Tuesday, last, lost a bunch of twenty or more keys, supposedly at the business men's picnic. Several Yale lock keys are among the number. He will gladly reward the finder if the keys are returned.

LEGEND OF PENN'S CAVE

Interesting Story of Place So Attractive to Visitors.

In the days when the West Branch Valley was a trackless wilderness of defiant pines and submissive hemlocks, twenty-five years before the first pioneer had attempted a permanent lodgment beyond Sunbury, a young Pennsylvania Frenchman from Lancaster county, named Malachi Boyer, alone and unaided, pierced the jungles to a point where Bellefonte is now located. The history of his travels has never been written, partly because he had no white companion to observe them and partly because he himself was unable to write. His very identity would now be forgotten were it not for traditions of the Indians, with whose lives he became strangely entangled.

A short, stocky built fellow was Malachi Boyer, with unusually prominent black eyes and coal black hair that hung in ribbon-like strands over his broad, low forehead. Fearless, yet conciliatory, he escaped a thousand times from Indian cunning and treachery, and as the months went by and he penetrated further into the forests he numbered many redskins among his cherished friends.

Why he explored these boundless wilds he could not explain, for it was not in the interest of science, as he scarcely knew of such a thing as geography, and it was not for trading, as he lived by the way. But on he forced his path, ever aloof from his own race, on the alert for the strange scenes which encompassed him day by day.

One beautiful month of April, there is no one who can tell the exact year, Malachi Boyer camped on the shores of Spring Creek. Near the Mammoth Spring was an Indian Camp whose occupants maintained a quasi-inter-course with the pale-face strangers. Sometimes old Chief O-ko-cho would bring gifts of corn to Malachi, who, in turn, presented the chieftain a hunting knife of the truest steel. And in this way Malachi came to spend more and more of his time about Indian camps, only keeping his distance at night and during religious ceremonies.

Old O-ko-cho's chief pride was centered in his seven stalwart sons, Humkin, Ho-ko-lin, Too-chin, Ostin, Chawkee-bin, A-ha-kin, Ko-lo-pa-kin, and his Diana-like daughter, Nita-nee. The seven brothers resolved themselves into a guard of honor for their sister, who had many suitors, among whom was the young chief, E-Faw, from the adjoining sub-tribe of the A-caw-ko-taws. But Nita-nee gently, though firmly, repulsed her numerous suitors, until such a time as her father should give her in marriage to one worthy of her regal blood.

Thus ran the course of Indian life when Malachi Boyer made his bed of hemlock boughs by the gurgling waters of Spring Creek. And it was the 'first sight of her washing a deer skin in the stream, that led him to prolong his stay and ingratiate himself with her father's tribe.

Few were the words that passed between Malachi and Nita-nee, many the glances, and often did the handsome pair meet in the mossy ravines near the camp grounds. But this was all clandestine love, for friendly as Indian and white may be in social intercourse, never could a marriage be tolerated, until—the blackhaired wanderer and the beautiful Nita-nee resolved to spend their lives together, and one moonless night started for the more habitable East. All night they treaded their silent way, climbing the mountains ridges, gliding through the velvet soiled hemlock glades, and wading, hand in hand, the splashing, resolute torrents. When morning came they breakfasted on dried meats and huckleberries, and bathed their faces in the mineral spring, until seven tall, htealthy forms, like animated mountain pines, stepped from the gloom and surrounded the eloping couple. Malachi drew a hunting knife, identical with the one he had given to Chief O-ko-cho, and seizing Nita-nee around the waist, stabbed right and left at his would-be captors. The first stroke pierced Humkin's heart and uncomplaining he sank down dying. The six remaining brothers, although receiving stab wounds, caught Malachi in their combined grasp and disarmed him; then one brother held the sobbing Nita-nee, while the other dragged the fighting Malachi across the mountain. This was the last the lovers saw of one another. Below the mountain lay a broad valley, from the centre of which rose a circular hillock, and it was to this mound the savage brothers led their victim. As they approached, a yawning cavern met their eyes, filled with greenish lime stone water, above which the arched roof rises thirty feet, and it was from here they shoved Malachi Boyer into the tide below. He sank for a moment, but when he rose to the surface, commenced to swim. He approached the ledge, but the brothers beat him back, so he turned and made for some dry land in the rear of the cavern. Two of the brothers ran from the entrance over the ridge to watch where there is another small opening; but though Malachi tried his best in the impenetrable darkness he could not find this or any other avenue of escape. He swam back to the cave's mouth, but the merciless Indians were still on guard. He climbed up again and again, but was repulsed, and once more retired to the dry cave. Every day for a week he renewed his efforts to escape, but the brothers were never absent. Hunger became unbearable, his strength gave way, but he vowed he would not let the redskins see him die, so forcing himself into one of the furtherest labyrinths, Malachi Boyer breathed his last.

Two days afterward the brothers entered the cave and discovered his body. They touched not the coins in his pockets, but weighted him with stones and dropped him into the deepest part of greenish lime stone water. And after these years those who have heard this legend declare that on still summer nights an unaccountable echo rings through the cave which sounds like "Nita-nee," "Nita-nee."

When a tourist party arrives at this interestingiplace, it is met by Mr. Campbell, one of the proprietors, and they proceeded promptly to the cave, where the large acetylene searchlight is prepared and the party boards the boat, propelled by a large paddle in the hands of a husky youth. The entrance to the cave is itself interesting, as it is also the source of the stream and actually the head of Penn's Creek. This famous and historic underground cavern presents a freak of nature never to be forgotten. As the boat glides quietly from room to room, the most beautiful croded blue limestone is seen forming magnificent natural arches with stalactite and stalagmite formations of most pleasing character and forms. The various colorings are beautiful and the ride of 1400 feet into this wonderful cave is full of interest and the return trip presents these formations again from another view-point, making it, if possible, even more beautiful. The entire trip in the cave takes but a half hour and at an extremely small cost.—Milton Miltonian.

Share of Women.

It has long been asserted that woman is less variable than man; but the certainty of that statement has lately lost its edge. It is probably untrue. There is no real reason to suppose that woman is less complex or less variable than man. She has the same title as he has to these conditions in which her particular characters, whatever they be, shall find their most complete and fruitful development. There is no more a single ideal type of woman than there is a single type of man. It takes all sorts even to make a sex. It has been in the past and always must be, a piece of gross presumption on man's part to say to woman. "Thus shalt thou be, and no other." Whom Nature has made different, man has no business to make or even to desire similar. The world wants all the powers of all the individuals of either sex.

On the other hand no good can come of the attempt to distort the development of those powers or to seek conformity to any type. Much of the evil of the past has arisen from the limitation of women to practically one profession. Even should it be incomparably the best, in general, it is by no means necessarily the best, or even good at all, for every individual. Men are to be heard saying: "A woman ought to be a wife and mother." For most women, this is the sphere in which their characteristic potencies will find best and most useful expression, both for self and others; but that is very different from saying that every woman ought to be a mother; or that no woman ought to be a surgeon. We may prefer the maternal to the surgical type; and there may be good reason for our preference; but the surgeon may be very useful, and useful or not, the question is not one of ought. Thoughtful people shou d know better than to make this constant confusion between what ought to be and what is.

Let us hold to our ideals, let us by all means have our scale of values: but the first question in such a case as this is as to what is. In point of fact all women are not of the same type; and our expression of what ought to be is none other than the passing of a censure upon Nature for her deeds. We may know better than she, or, as has happened, we may know worse.—Dr. C. W. Saleeby in the Forum.

The Mask is Off.

It was but natnral that sooner or later Mr. Berry and his managers should expose their hand. From the beginning it had been suspected that the Keystone Party was but a scheme of Bryan agents to restablish Mr. Bryan in Pennsylvania. This no longer is a suspicion. All the evidence at hand stamps it an absolute certainty.

Last week the State Committee of the Keystone Party decided to nominate candidates for Congress and the State Legislature. The few so-called independent Republicans in the committee pathetically opposed the proposition. When they entered the Keystone Party movement they supposed that it was intended merely to nominate candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of Internal Affairs and State Treasurer. But Mr. Berry and his clique of Bryanites were in control of the State Committee, just as they were in control of the recent Keystone convention, and they insisted on the Bryan program on putting up candidates for Congress.

The plan had the warm approval of Mr. Berry, an ardent Bryanite. It was sprung on the State Committee, at the very first meeting, by Eugene C. Bonniwell, a whooping Bryanite from 'way back. It went through with a rush, because Mr. Bryan's friends are in the majority in the committee, and now the Keystone Party stands before the public, unmasked and bodly admitting that it is out for the election of Democratic Congressman and Democratic members of the Legislature.

The purpose of all this is quite clear. Democratic Congressmen are wanted by the Bryanites in order that the protective tariff may be destroyed and President Taft's administration obstructed and weakened at every turn. To cripple the tide of prosperity now spreading over the land is what Mr. Berry's plan would accomplish, for he nor no other Democrat will deny that with Democrats once in control in Congress their first move would be to overthrow the protective tariff and replace it with free trade. No matter how one may view the matter this is exactly what it means.

Mr. Berry and his little band of followers are opposed to a protective tariff. They want to see this country placed on a free trade basis. In this they consistently reflect the views and aims of Mr. Bryan. Mr. Berry knows at this early day that he hasn't even the ghost of a show to be elected Governor. If he is a close observer he must realize by this time that the best he can do is to get a part of the Democratic vote and a few independent Republicans. So Mr. Berry is concentrating his efforts toward the election of Democratic Congressmen from Pennsylvania who will be expected to follow the Bryan leadership in everything that it implies.

First the election of Democratic members of the House, at Washington. The second part of the program is the election of Democratic members of the Pennsylvania Legislature.

The reason is so plain as to explain itself. The next Legislature will elect a United States Senator for a full term of six years. With Republicans in control in the Legislature a Republican will be elected United States Senator. He will be a Republican who may be depended upon to vigorously support a protective tariff and to stand shoulder to shoulder with the administration of President Taft. A Democratic majority in the next Legislature would mean the election of a Democrat as a United States Senator. The Bryanites who had elected him would expect him to aid in breaking down the protective tariff and place every stumbling block possible in the path of President Taft.

The election of Mr. Tener as Governor and of Republican members of Congress means that Pennsylvania will not countenance any tearing down of the protective tariff principle. It will mean that returning prosperity is not to be delayed for an indefinite period.

Mr. Berry is attempting to play his little game, but when it comes down to fooling the people of Pennsylvania he will find that he has wandered into the wrong pew.

Killing the Goose Again.

The old family physician being away on a much-needed vacation, his practice was intrusted to his son, a recent medical graduate. When the old man returned the youngster told him, among other things, that he ha l cured Miss Ferguson, an aged and wealthy spinster, of her chronic indigestion.

"My boy," said the old doctor, "I'm proud of you, but Miss Ferguson's indigestion is what put you through college." —Everybody's Magazine.

An Early Wall Paper.

On preparing a room in Bradbourne Hall, Derbyshire, in 1882, I found, partly covered by an old oak cupboard, considerable remains of quite early eighteenth century wall paper, of pale green tint, with a flowing pattern in darker color on it. This paper was made in squares of about twenty inches, and I was able to rescue two or more complete pieces. It had been printed on rather thick paper from woodcut blocks, and each square was nailed up with coarse iron tacks about one and a half inches apart, each tack being run through squares or washers of brown leather, so that both tack heads and washers showed all around each square of paper. It is possible that this wall paper was of late seventeenth century date. Bradbourne Hall, in the lower peak, is a picturesque house, almost unaltered, of the time of James I., having been then fashioned from the canonical house of the Augustins of Dunstable. It was just the place—"far from the madding crowd" —where curious details of domestic decorations would survive.—London Notes and Queries.

The Cynic's Point of View.

Of course we all like to know that our enemies are vulnerable, but it is only the cynical elect who can appreciate with fine epicurean fastidiousness the glorious revelation that their friends are human after all. And it is not only the weakness of those near and dear to us, but their misfortunes and annoyances, which give a thrill of illicit joy to those honest contortionists who can look in their own hearts. I once heard a young mother say that there was only one thing which gave her greater pleasure than hearing that the children of her friends were sick, and that was to hear that they were bad. No one but a brom-idiot (to borrow the excellent root with which Mr. Gelett Burgess has enriched us) would think of condemning this young woman for being malicious or unkind. Misery is not the only human quality that loves company. Some of her distant relatives — Anxiety, Discouragement, Annoyance—are equally sociable.—Atlantic.

The Forbidden City.

Peking has been a city for something like 3,000 years, first as the capital of a small state, then destroyed, again rebuilt and finally molded into the form in which we now know it, with its Chinese, Tartar, Imperial and Forbidden cities, each with its inclosing wall. Nobody has ever yet attempted to tell the full tale of its intrigues, its cabals, plots and counterplots. Few know anything about them. No one person knows them all. If only the bricks that form the walls could find a tongue, if only the pavilions on the Coal Hill could produce the sights and sounds that have fallen to their lot to see and hear, there would doubtless be a tale to tell which might vie in interest and dramatic force with anything that ancient Rome or Babylon has given, even through the medium of fiction.—Shanghai Mercury.

Napoleon and Waterloo.

There is nothing in the result of the Waterloo campaign to show any decline in Napoleon's powers of mind. The plan of the campaign as laid down by the emperor was a most brilliant one, and had it not rained on the night of the 17th of June Napoleon would in all likelihood have kept his throne. Had it not rained and made the land miry he would have had his artillery in position four hours before he actually did, and Wellington would have been disposed of long before Blucher's arrival. Even as it was, the Iron Duke was pretty well used up when the Prussian came up on his left. Napoleon's genius never shone more brilliantly than it did in his last campaign. He was defeated by the elements and by the unaccountable stupidity of some of his lieutenants.—New York American.

Assyrian Seals.

The ancient Assyrians nearly 6,000 years ago put in moist clay their seals, engraved in intaglio upon precious stones, on chests and doors, in order to prevent their being opened. There were no locks or keys in those days. If they wished to send a private letter they would often seal it with a hippogriff, which fabulous winged horse was regarded as the emblem of secrecy. Centuries later the Greeks and Romans adopted similar devices for the same purpose.

He Whistled.

Old Lady (to grocer's boy)—Don't you know that it is very rude to whistle when dealing with a lady?

Boy—That's what the guv'nor told me to do, mum.

"Told you to whistle?"

"Yes'm. He said if we ever sold you anything we'd have to whistle for the money."

Her Sweeping Abilities.

Mrs. Neurich—Did you notice how grandly our daughter swept into the room at Mrs. Puppson's reception last night?

Neurich—Sure I did! When it comes to sweeping into a room Mamie wins in a walk. But when it comes to sweeping out a room she goes lame.

Wanted It Plain.

Mrs. Youngwife—I want to get some salad. Dealer — Yes'm. How many heads? Mrs. Youngwife—Oh, goodness! I thought you took the heads off. I just want plain chicken salad.

Appearances.

Magistrate — If I remember rightly, this is not your first appearance in court. Prisoner—No, your honor, but I hope you don't judge by appearances.

Too Quick For Her.

Senator Clay, at a dinner in Marietta, praised the ready wit of a Georgia lawyer.

"Even in his youth, when he was only an instructor in Hiawassee College, my alma mater—even then," said Senator Clay, "he had a ready wit.

"They say his wife hinted to him one day just before Easter.

"'It is the spring, the beautiful spring, and see—even the trees, dear, have all got new clothes.'

"'So they have' he answered, readily, 'beautiful new clothes. And made 'em all themselves, too, besides supplying the material.'"—New York Tribune.

Why Suffer?

If you suffer pain from any cause, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills will relieve it —and leave no bad after-effects. That's the important thing. Neither do they create a habit. More often the attacks become less frequent, or disappear altogether. Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills have no other effect except to relieve pain and quiet nervous irritation.

"We are never without Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. My husband and son, aged 15 were always subject to sick headache until we began using these Pills, and they have broken them up entirely. Don't think they have had to use them for six months. I recommend them to every one. A few weeks ago I heard an old lady friend was sick. I went to see her. She was down with LaGrippe, and nearly crazy with awful backache. I gave her one of the Anti-Pain Pills and left another for her to take in a short time. They helped her right away, and she says she will never be without them again. Last winter my husband was taken with pluerisy on both sides, and I know he would have died if it hadn't been for the Pills. In less than half an hour he was sweating, and went to bed and slept." CHICAGO MERCHANT MAKES STATEMENT.

After Spending Thousands of Dollars and Consulting the Most Eminent Physicians, He Was Desperate.

CHICAGO, ILLS.—Mr. J. G. Becker, of 134 Van Buren St., a well-known wholesale dry goods dealer, states as follows:

"I have had catarrh for more than thirty years. Have tried everything on earth and spent thousands of dollars for other medicines and with physicians, without getting any lasting relief, and can say to you that I have found Peruna the only remedy that has cured me permanently.

"Peruna has also cured my wife of catarrh. She always keeps it in the house for an attack of cold, which it invariably cures in a very short time."

Japanese Weddings.

A Japanese wedding always takes place in the "sanctuary" which is to be found in every Japanese home—the "tokonoma," or elevated place of honor. This is decorated for the occasion with symbolic articles, such as pine, plum trees and bamboo, signifying long life, peace and honesty; rice, always offered to the gods, and the sake jugs from which the "butterflies" (bridesmaids) pour out drink for the happy couple.

Only ten persons are present at the marriage—the bride and groom, their parents, the go-between and his wife and two "butterflies." The bride takes her place near the bridesgroom but, as befits her inferior state, on a lower level. Her veil conceals her face till the ceremoney is completed.

Presently the "broker" (the man who has brought the couple together) makes formal announcement of the marriage, to the low-toned accompaniment of singers, without instrumental accompaniment in an adjoining room.

Ordinarily the Japanese wedding ceremony has neither religious nor legal formality; it is an affair of the families entirely. In former times, however, the priests took a large part in the function, and there are indications of a return to this custom. In 1900, for instance, at the marriage of their crown prince, a solemn Shinto service was held within the sanctuary of the imperial palace. Usually, however, says the Wide World Magazine, the wedding ceremony is simply a formal drinking of sake by bride and bridegroom from the same cup. This partaking of the rice wine together is an act as solemn as drinking from the communion cup among Christians.

Presently the "butterflies" prepare to fulfill their office, and on bended knee present the two-spouted cup of sake to the mouths of the bride and bridegroom alternately, this drinking from one cup signifying their future unity in joy and sorrow. From each of three tiny cups of different sizes the bride and bridegroom each take three sips. After the third cup the "go-between" announces that the ceremoney is ended. "Orio" and "Chrysanthemum" are now Mr. and Mrs. Tamura, and congratulations and feasting are the order of the day. The groom does not kiss his bride in public; that, in Japanese eyes, would be unpardonably coarse and vulgar.

Removing her white silk veil, the young wife rises from her seat beside the bridegroom and passes the wine cup to the assembled friends. Before the banquet she retires and reappears in a different dress, repeating this three or four times during the dinner, if she comes from a rich home. After the bride and bridegroom have taken their places everybody present approaches, bows to them and offers congratulations. With each guest the happy pair are supposed to drink a cup of wine, but this is only pretence.

The wedding feast itself is a splendid and costly affair, with rice served in countless different ways, oyster broth and many other elaborate dishes, washed down with hot and cold sake. But at last the guests take their leave and the young couple are left alone.

Proof Positive.

John D. Crimmins, at a St. Patrick's Day dinner at Delmonico's, was praising the good that Irish stock had worked in America.

"The proof of this good," said Mr. Crimmins with a smile, "is as strong as the proof of Dawson's marriage."

"A man, you know, asked another man if Dawson was a benedict or a bachelor.

"'Well,' was the reply. 'I don't know Dawson, so I can't say positively; but last Sunday morning I saw him pushing a baby carriage, with a woman on either side of him, and as I passed the younger woman said: "You brute, you've been like that twice this week—you can't deny it!" And then the older woman, who looked like the younger one's mother, exclaimed: "Lizzie, if you don't make him put another thousand on his life before his liver's altogether gone, you're a bigger fool than I took you for!"'"

Women as Soldiers.

Lord Roberts' Opinion—I do not think it practicable or desirable that women should serve their country under arms, says Field Marshal Lord Roberts, in the Strand. It would also be unnecessary if the country adopts, as all other European countries have adopted, the principle of universal military training for its young men.

I think girls should undergo physical training in the same way as boys—not with a view to doing men's work, but in order to fit themselves to be the mothers of a strong and healthy race.

I also think it highly desirable that all women should be trained in first aid and nursing, for such knowledge would be of great use to the community,

---

Sarah Bernhardt's Opinion—I remember, says Sarah Bernhardt, when I first appeared as the Duc de Reichstadt. I thought to myself how little disadvantage sex is to a woman who wishes to play a distinguished part, not merely on the stage, but in real life. Women are only weak when their characters are weak. Surely Louis XVI, did not think women were weak when battalions of them were surrounding his palace at Versailles. My experience has shown me that French women are more resolute, more fearless, more competent than the women of other nations. They would not plead their sex in the face of the enemy. Just as Jeanne d'Arc was a born military leader, so, in case of a crisis to-day, many women would be found who, if men were pusillanimous, would cry with Lady Macbeth: "Give me the dagger!"

Hurried Stage Dressing.

Hurried dressings often bring about ludicrous incongruities in costume. I remember in my early days the massive forms of the well-known English singer, Ainsley Cooke. I was in his dressing room at the old Adelphi when he was playing "Falstaff." "Ah," he said, 'I am thankful for one thing. I am blessed with an angel for a wife. In fact, I don't know what I should do without her. I don't trust to my dresser. My household genius comes every day and places all my things ready for me. By jove, "I'm late! Here, just help me on with these things. This basket-body of mine—here, stuff all these things in! I've sent my man out for a paper. Well, that angel of a wife of mine—Hang me, I've only one boot on! Where the deuce is the other? I must be on in a minute. Gad, what has that careless woman done with it? That's my call. But's where's my boot? Oh, why am I cursed with an idiot for a wife?"

He stormed, he raged: I and the call-boy searched everywhere for "Falstaff's" other boot. The singer cursed his matrimonial fate, and just then my amateurish dressing caused his basket costume to fall off! That moment I felt it time to escape, but just as I was picking up my hat I cast one glance at the strange, exciting scene—"Faltsaff," in despair and rage, with one boot, and his massive frame, parted from his waist, lying in front of him—but, to the delight of all, from within that basket-body stuck out the missing boot! In the hurry of dressing, it had been stuffed inside.

One Chance to Lose.

"Now that the Democrats are crowing over their prospects of winning the congressional elections," said Representative Butler of Pennsylvania, the other day, according to the Popular Magazine, "I am reminded of what good old "Ike' Hill, assistant sergeant-at-arms of the House, used to say on the eve of an election. He was a Democrat through and through, but he was a philosophical Democrat.

"When anybody asked him how he thought the vote would go, he would invariably reply:

"By gosh! I think we've got 'em, if they don't buy us off."

Milady's Mirror

"I suppose that every woman who motors works out the theory of complexion treatment which best suits her," declared a woman the other day whose face does not look as though she had traveled thousands of dusty miles in her automobile in the last few years.

"You see, it is useless to use water," she went on emphatically. "Perhaps soft water might be cleansing, but you can't get it while traveling. So I experimented for the best results in the most condensed form, and I've found what suits me.

"Before we start—indeed, while I am dressing for the journey—I smear my face and throat, too, with cold cream. The cream is made from white wax, with just enough almond oil and rosewater to make the wax soft. You see, my object is not to make a tissue builder, but to prevent dirt from getting into the pores, to make a mask, and I object to grease. Therefore I melt some white wax in a cup by putting it into boiling water, and then I remove the cup from the heat and stir in the oil and rosewater. When I can I put in a little more rosewater than oil, and I always scent the mixture with a few drops of essence of roses. This goes in last in order that the heat shall not detract from the fragrance."

What of the Color of Your Hair?

The color of a woman's hair as given to her by nature—not by peroxide, henna and the like—is more than a matter of beauty and harmony with the complexion.

According to the phrenologist, who closely considers every part of the human body in connection with character, the color of the hair is a distinct betrayer of one's disposition and mental and moral capacity.

Thus straight black hair that grows conrse and thick is supposed to belong to the woman who is industrious and orderly, but will never set the world on fire with her mental capacity.

Straight hair, moreover, indicates greater power to rule others than usually belongs to the envied curly head.

Auburn hair, though not generally known, is said to denote a kindly, sympathetic nature, but give one or two tones deeper and the red headed sister will be hot tempered, domineering and jealous.

Fine glossy brown hair with chestnut hues is thought to accompany an acute mind, and usually the owner has strong intellectual tastes.

Curly black hair is supposed to indicate an intense passionate nature with a touch of coarseness.

Drab or dun colored hair usually means a commonplace, nondescript, colorless person without strong likes or dislikes and with small capacity for friendship.

Pure golden hair means ideality. It is rarely found on women of gross nature—unless bought—and its owner usually has fine sensibilities and is a lover of music and the arts.

Camphor Ice.

Some women find nothing so softening to the skin as camphor ice. This can be bought with good assurance of purity, but is easily made at home from the following recipe:

Six drams of camphor, six drams of white beeswax, six drams of spermaceti and two ounces of olive oil. Put in the ingredients together in a porcelain lined saucepan and melt until smooth. Set the pan in a larger vessel of hot water or use a double boiler to prevent burning.

Pour into small glass jars to cool. Porcelain jars used for certain cheeses are excellent to keep this grease. That not intended for immediate use can have the lid sealed on with strips of adhesive plaster.

When making the grease in hot weather half the quantity is sufficient.

Wavy Locks.

Even the straightest locks in the world can be made wavy by the simple process of wetting the hair with alcohol and pinning it in little loops tight down to the head. Do not put the alcohol on with your hands or brush, but use a little wad of absorbent cotton and dab the alcohol lightly over the hair. Then, taking a strand at a time, pinch it into loops about two inches apart and pin each loop snugly down. This can be done across the back of the head as well as on the top and sides, and the hair will wave and be perfectly dry in about half an hour, especially if a thin piece of veiling is tied all over the head as tightly as possible.

To Develop the Neck.

The quickest way to accomplish good results in developing the neck and filling out the hollows is to inhale deeply and force the breath against the throat, holding it for ten or twenty seconds. As you inhale rise on your toes; as you exhale drop on your heels. It is well to stand before a mirror while practicing this to see that the breath fills out every hollow.

FOR PURE PIES

State Food Agents Crusading Against Pies That are "Doctored."

A label on every wedge of pie or cessation of the use of the "pie filler" containing benzoate of soda is the ultimatum of the state dairy and food authorities. Hotel keepers restaurateurs and dairy lunch men who serve cuts of luscious pie which away down deep contain benzoate must compy with the pure food law which prohibits the use of benzoate of soda in quantities greater than one-tenth of one per cent, and requires that all foods containing less than one-tenth of one per cent, shall advertise the fact.

The agents of the dairy and food division are going up and down the state buying pie. They are taking little rounds ones, halves and larger ones and the wedges of great ones which ornament railroad restaurants and all-night cafes. Pie is going under the chemical test because it has been found that many bakers have been using the "filler," some of which is preserved with benzoate.

Agents of the division have taken numerour samples in Philadelphia and other cities and they await examination, while in Pittsburg Chemist F. T. Ashman is working night and day on the cuts of all manner and sizes which are on the tables. A few days ago fifty samples were gathered from the restaurants.

Improvement in Crops.

Very general rains throughout the west have improved the crop situarion, asys Bradstreets. Corn has been especially benefited, and in some states the moisture now in the ground is thought sufficient to carry the crop to maturity. Deterioration shown earlier has been checked and in some instances repaired, but drought-damaged early corn in the southwest is claimed to have been too far gone to be helped. The late planted crop generally looks well. Pastures, too, have been improved.

Spring-wheat threshings are turning out better than expected. Yields are best in southern part of the American belt. Canadian crop yields also tend to enlarge. The crop there is an early one, due to early planting and some premature ripening. The first frost of the season is reported in Assiniboia, Canada.

Winter wheat and oats are moving to market freely, and the general grain movement is the largest to date in thirteen years.

The hay crop is not expected to exceed 60,000,000 tons, or 8 per cent. below last year. Hay is a light yield in the Pacific northwest. Prices are very high at all markets for this stage of the season.

Cotton crop reports are better. Drought in Texas has been partially relived. In the lower Mississippi valley cotton has improved and boll weevil is not doing the damage earlier feared. Cotton needs dry weather in Oklahoma. In the south Atlantic states the report is of general improvement. Sugar, corn and rice are all doing well in the south.

Real Estate Transfers.

Recorder William Brown has record d the following real estate transfers in the last week:

Jno L. Holme et al to Leah F. Dunlap, July 6, 1910, tract land in Ferguson township; $350.

J. Foster Nelson et ux to Henry Mirbach, July 25, 1910, tract land in Philipsburg; $6,000.

John Coyle et ux to Frank Kolki, August 12, 1910, tract land in Rush township; $350.

Even With Dog Catcher

The appointment of two dog catchers for the borough of Spring Grove, York county, where every canine tagged or untagged has a large circle of friends, is causing much in feeling. "Foxy," an old fellow with a reputation for eating pins, bit one of the dog catchers who attempted to capture him, and now the borough residents have expressed their sentiment by subscribing for the purchase of a tag and a muzzle for the dog.

Jim's Diplomacy.

Harry Laughlin, the billiard expert, says the Cleveland Leader, told at an exhibition game in Toledo a billiard story. "Once, when I had my own parlor in Columbus," he said, "I was a good deal disturbed by the loss of chalk. Chalk disappeared at a tremendous rate, and I said to my helper:

"'Keep a better eye on the chalk, Jim. I'm no millionaire.'

"'I know the gents wot pockets the chalk. Mr. Laughlin,' Jim said; 'but they're reg'lar customers. I guess you wouldn't want to offend 'em, would you?'

"'Well, no,' I said; 'I wouldn't. You might give them a gentle hint, though. Use your diplomacy.'

"Jim, I found out later, used his diplomacy that night. He walked up to one of my best patrons that just pocketed a piece of chalk, and said:

"'You're in the milk business, ain't you, sir?'

"'Yes. Why?' the patron asked.

"'I thought so,' said Jim 'from the amount of chalk you carry away. The boss likes enterprise, and he told me to tell you that if you wanted a bucket of water now and then you could have one and welcome.'"

Somebody Please Help Berry.

William H. Berry, seems to put his foot into it every time he opens his mouth. Unless some person who knows facts comes to his aid and keeps him on the track, he will be compelled to devote the last weeks of the gubernatorial campaign to correcting his rash statements of the earlier weeks. Keep in mind the fact that Mr. Berry is seeking the office of Governor of Pennsylvania and then read this thrust at his Democratic rival, Mr. Grim:

> The fact that I exhibited the qualification for unearthing just such frauds as that (the Capitol frauds) is one potent reason for the energies of the Penrose machine and the corrupt leaders who are resolved that I shall not again hold an office in Harrisburg. They have nothing to fear from Mr. Grim. He sat in the Senate while they burned one Capitol down over his head and stole seven millions of dollars in building another and never even scented fraud.

Won't somebody please inform Mr. Berry that Mr. Grim did not sit in the Senate until 1903, or six years after the Capitol was burned. One of the men who sat in the Legislature at that time, it appears, was William T. Creasy, one of Mr. Berry's backers. Mr. Creasy didn't scent fraud, but no one, no Republican at least, has essayed to charge that he was therefore dishonest or that he winked his eye at crime.

It would seem that Mr. Berry needs somebody to save him from himself.

Campbell Family Reunion.

An interesting event last week was the third annual reunion of the Henry C. Campbell family, held on Thursday and Friday at historic Penn's Cave, now owned by Dr. Clay Campbell and Robert Campbell. Henry C. Campbell is a former County Commissioner and at one time a resident of Ferguson township. He now resides at State College. The reunion was a most enjoyable one, bringing together numerous members of the Campbell family who are located at different parts of the State. Those who were in attendance included the following: Mr. and Mrs. Milo Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Koch, Penna. Furnace; Mr. and Mrs. Bert Meek, Miss Esther Campbell, State College; Miss Florence Flasher, Philadelphia; Misses Lizzie Moore and Rose Williams, Tyrone: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Williams, Pittsburg; Mrs. Hodley Corning, Florence, Colorado; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Musser, Tyrone; Isaac Miller, Philadelphia; Misses Laura and Jessie Gregory, Samuel Gregory, Petersburg; Dr. Clay Campbell, Philadelphia; R. P. Campbell, Penn's Cave; J. B. Campbell, Clay Musser, Eleanor Musser, Richard Campbell, Tyrone; Claude Koch, Hubert Koch, Mildred Campbell, Charles Campbell, Penna. Furnace; Ruth Meek, Marjorie Meek, State College.

Beighel Family Reunion.

The fourteenth annual reunion of the descendants of Jacob Beighel was held at the Fetterhoof home, at Spruce Creek, on Thursday, last, and was attended by several hundred persons. An elaborate dinner was served. Rev. Fred W. Barry, of Bellefonte, as historian, presented a very complete family tree of the Beighel family, the reading of which was listened to with great interest by all present. Officers for the next year were elected as follows: George Kuhn, Altoona, president; George Fetterhoof, Rose S. Fetterhoof and Mrs. Margaret Fetterhoof, all of Spruce Creek, vice president, secretary and treasurer, respectively. Mrs. Neff, Mrs. Henry and Mrs. Alice Fetterhoof were chosen as a Committee on Resolutions. It was decided to hold next year's reunion at the same place on the third Thursday in August.

Doctor Green Under Knife.

Dr. George D. Green, of Lock Haven, who is well known in Bellefonte, was operated on for appendicitis on Saturday evening, last. He was not very ill but concluded to take no chances and the operation was accordingly performed. He now is much improved.

To The Merchants of Bellefonte.

Bellefonte boy who is meeting with success as a merchant in a town in western Pennsylvania. It will be well worth while for every merchant in Bellefonte to think over what he told us. The boy was Joseph Fauble, and the town in question was Monongahela, where he conducts a successful clothing store. A short time ago all of the merchants in Monongahela got together and arranged to hold a "Booster Week" for the town. Each merchant was assessed a fixed amount to make up a fund of something like $800. With this a general advertising campaign was conducted—through the newspapers and by means of posters, circulars in several languages, handbills, etc. This advertising extended a general invitation to the people of all that section to visit Monongahela during the week and do their buying. Every person purchasing $10 worth of goods from any one store was reimbursed for his railroad fare. Every person who purchased $2 or $3 worth of goods from any one store received a ticket good for one meal at any of the several of the best restaurants in the town. In a word, the merchants of Monongahela said to the people for miles around: "Come to our town to do your buying; we will be glad to have you and will make it worth your while." They advertised what they had to sell, advertised prices and emphasized the fact that Monongahela stood ready to extend a hearty greeting and welcome.

What was the result? We will let Mr. Fauble's words answer that question.

"IT WAS THE GREATEST BUSINESS WEEK THE TOWN EVER HAD AND IT COST NO MERCHANT MORE THAN $38 OR $40 AS HIS SHARE OF THE EXPENSE."

Following this up, Mr. Fauble gave another valuable pointer. He said:

"THE MERCHANTS IN MONONGAHELA ARE ALWAYS TRYING TO EDUCATE PEOPLE INTO DOING THEIR BUSINESS IN MONONGAHELA."

Wouldn't it be a fine thing if the merchants of Bellefonte would get together and try and educate the farmers of this county into DOING ALL OF THEIR BUSINESS IN BELLEFONTE?

Bellefonte has some of the best stores in the country. They are in position to give the people of Centre County a first-class variety and quality and at prices that will compare with any other stores. Bellefonte merchants are honest, courteous and accommodating. They want to extend their business wherever possible. They have the opportunity in their hands if they will but exert themselves sufficiently to avail themselves of it. They might travel much farther and fare worse by taking a lesson from Monongahela.

Mr. Berry's Candidacy

am at a loss to understand how far he would go in advancing this cause in the event of his election to the Governorship.

"As a Democrat who believes in party organization and submission to the will of the majority, I shall vote for Webster Grim for Governor. I believe he is by far the best qualified for the position of all the men who have been named for the office, both by experience and on account of his ability.

"I would pick Mr. Tener as the next best equipped. I am not acquainted with either the Prohibition or the Socialistic nominee for Governor, but knowing Mr. Berry I would say that either of them would make a better Governor than the vacillating, time-serving and insincere office-seeker who heads the fifth party ticket."

When Mayor Liebel's charges were called to the attention of Mr. Berry, at Philadelphia, he denied that he had visited Mr. Mulvihill's room. He asserted that his only talks with Mr. Mulvihill had taken place in the hotel lobby, at Allentown.

Wedded at Boalsburg.

Oscar M. Zimmerman, of Bellefonte, a son of County Commissioner H. E. Zimmerman, is one of those young men who have little or nothing to say about themselves and who achieve success because of their sterling worth and strict attention to business. He is engaged in operating the large steam road engine, used by Contractor R. B. Taylor on the new State road through Bellefonte, and incidentally is regarded as one who is always "on the job." On Saturday, last, we thought it rather strange that he was not at work as usual and our curiosity was aroused all the more when we happened to meet him on the street and observed that he was dressed for some special occasion. The explanation was lacking until it was revealed by the marriage license docket at the Court House. With this as a guide it developed that at 2 o'clock on Saturday Mr. Zimmerman and Miss Eva V. Carson were married at the home of Rev. J. I. Stonecypher, at Boalsburg. The bride is a daughter of James Carson and is a splendid young woman. For the present at least, Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman will reside in Bellefonte. That their wedded life may be very happy is the wish of a host of friends.

MRS. LAWRENCE L. BROWN DEAD

Former Resident of Bellefonte Dies at Englewood, N. J.

No little sorrow was expressed by residents of Bellefonte on receipt of the news, on Sunday, last, of the death of Mrs. Lawrence L. Brown, who passed away on Saturday night, in the hospital at Englewood, N. J. The deceased was at one time a resident of Bellefonte, making her home on East High Street. Mr. Brown, it will be recalled, was at that time engaged in the coal and grain business at the stand now occupied by E. K. Rhoads.

Mrs. Brown was a native of Huntingdon county and was born July 7, 1856, at Huntingdon. Her maiden name was Neff. She is survived by her husband and one daughter, Elizabeth. A brother, Professor J. A. Neff, of Altoona, and a sister, Mrs. Frank Hall, of Harrisburg, also survive. Interment was made at Huntingdon, on Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

MRS. JAMES MCGINLEY.

Mrs. James McGinley, a well known and highly respected resident at Ironsville, died at her late home at that place on Saturday, last, after an illness of about ten days. Prior to her marriage Mrs. McGinley was Miss Lydia Rhodes, and was born at Gatesburg, April 7, 1848, making her age 62 years, 4 months and 13 days. She was married to James McGinley, at Lewistown, later removing to Colerain Forge. From that place they subsequently removed to Pennsylvania Furnace and also Spruce Creek, eventually making their home at Ironsville, where they resided for upward of seventeen years. Surviving are her husband and the following sons and daughters: J. R. McGinley, of Cleveland, O.; Mrs. Annie McNeal, of Tyrone; Mrs. Sarah Smith, of Nealmont; Miss Effie McGinley, at home; Mrs. Clara Shelley, of Altoona; Edgar McGinley, of Tyrone. The eldest son, Samuel, died in Cleveland, O., July 17, 1901. She is also survived by these brothers and sisters: Mrs. Sarah Snook, of Erie; Samuel Rhodes, of Osceola Mills; Simon Rhodes, of Badin; D. R. Rhodes, of Gypsum City, Kan.; N. H. Rhodes and Mrs. Walter Zimmerman, of Tyrone; A. G. C. Rhodes, of Rochester; Mrs. Samuel Snyder, and G. D. Rhodes, of Tyrone, and a half-sister, Mrs. Isaac Woomer, of Graysville.

MRS. HATTIE TOOT.

Mrs. Hattie Toot, wife of John Toot, of Lock Haven, died on Saturday evening, last, at her late home at that place. Death was due to a complication of diseases. Mrs. Toot was aged 28 years and 6 months. Surviving are her husband and two sons and one daughter, also her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Gregg, of Bellefonte. Three sisters and three brothers also survive, as follows: Miss Julia Gregg, of Bellefonte; Mrs. B. F. Graden and Mrs. Sourbeck, of Lock Haven and William Gregg, of Lewistown. Interment was made at Bellefonte.

MRS. CATHERINE GRAFFIUS.

On Friday last the spirit life of Mrs. Catherine Graffius passed into the eternal world after six weeks' of illness from a general breaking down of the system incident to old age. Last winter Mrs. Graffius was afflicted with a severe attack of rheumatism and the disease left her body in a racked condition from which she was not able to overcome. She was a most excellent woman of high moral character and always ready to do some one a kindness. She was a consistent member of the First Methodist Episcopal church and her life was lived in accordance with the teaching of that faith. Mrs. Catherine Hamilton Miles Graffius was born at Hecla Forge, Centre county, December 2, 1831, and was therefore aged 78 years, 8 months and 17 days. With her parents she moved to Bellefonte where she resided a few years after which the family moved to Birmingham, Huntingdon county. In June 1854 she was married to Adolphus Miles, of Tyrone and since that time has made this city her home. Mrs. Graffius is survived by two sons, John and Harry Graffius, of Tyrone and by two sisters and two brothers, namely: Mrs. P. Symington, of Tyrone; Mrs. Nancy Henry, of Pittsburg; W. W. and Henry Miles, of Tyrone.—Tyrone Herald.

CLARENCE RAYMOND.

We are sorry to note the untimely death of Clarence Raymond, aged 21 years, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Raymond, below Boalsburg, after an illness of three months with typhoid fever. Deceased was a model young man and his death is mourned by a large number of warm and admiring friends. He is survived by his parents, one brother and two sisters. The young man was a cousin of County Commissioner John L. Dunlap, of Bellefonte. Burial was made on Tuesday, at 10 o'clock, in the Boalsburg cemetery.

Warns Against Typhoid Fever.

"Beware of typhoid fever" is the timely warning that is given by State Health Commissioner Dixon.

"Boil all water that you have the slightest reason to suspect. Don't drink any water unless you know that it is free from pollution.

"If you receive milk in individual bottles, be dead sure that your milkman properly disinfects the bottles before they are refilled each time. Else how do you know these receptacles may not have previously been used in a household infected with disease and you may be feeding your children the germs of typhoid, scarlet fever, diphtheria or other communicable disease?

"If these suggestions seem too oft repeated, and you are incliped to treat them lightly," continued Dr. Dixon, "just look about you and see how typhoid is getting its victims.

"Swimming and paddling in poluted waters, drinking from any spring or well that happens to be at hand when you are thirsty, especially when off on a picnic in the country, and then carrying back to your home and to your community deadly germs of typhoid—these are dangers that I wish could be driven home forcibly to our boys and girls and men and women just at this time of the year.

"If every farmer would realize that every time he washed his milk cans in polluted water he was toying with the precious lives of perhaps hundreds of his fellow-men, I know he would be more careful.

"Just a word to the physicians. The immediate reporting of each case of typhoid fever occurring in your practice may save an epidemic. The case may be on a dairy farm from which milk is served. Think what this means if infection starts to spread from such a source. One day's delay in reporting such a case might mean the loss of many lives."

Student Bled to Death.

Fred L. Condict, a member of the Freshman class of Bucknell, and a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Condict, now residing in Trenton N. J., died at the Jefferson hospital, Philadelphia Monday from a hemmorrhage of the eye, says the Lewisburg "Journal." The family lived in Lewisburg for several years. The young man about nine years ago was struck in the eye with a ball from an air rifle, losing the sight of the optic. The eye was removed at the hospital, but it was impossible to stop the flow of blood following the operation, although transfusion from the veins of his father was attempted.

Meetings at Hunter's Park.

A series of meetings will be held in Hunter's Park, beginning Sunday evening, Aug. 28 and continuing over the following Sabbath. Meeting each evening at 7:45. On Sunday, September 4, there will be an all-day meeting. The first service will begin at 10 A. M. Bring your basket along and stay all day. Rev. A. J. Hill, of Bradford, and Rev. G. J. Kelley, of Unionville, are expected to help in the meeting. Take your coat and lantern along, you may need them.

REV. J. F. COLLINS.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

BAILEYVILLE PICNIC

Large Crowd in Attendance and All Had Splendid Time.

Upward of 3,000 persons were in attendance and enjoyed a delightful day on the occasion of the annual Baileyville picnic, held on Saturday, last, in Kustenbauder grove, at Penna. Furnace. The weather was as perfect as if it had been ordered for the occasion.

The Baileyville picnic is the great annual event of the year for the people of that part of Centre County and also of the nearby townships in Huntingdon and Blair Counties. Hundreds of families attend each year and family, neighborhood and inter-county reunions are a feature of the day's outing in the woods.

An interesting incident of this year's picnic was the 49th annual reunion of the survivors of Company E, 45th Penna. Vols. The company headquarters were located on the picnic grounds and designated by the battle scarred and powder stained flag carried through the war. Twelve members of Company E were present, namely: W. H. Musser, W. H. Fry, J. G. Heberling, G. W. Loner, Perry Cupp, Porter Bateman, Henry Barto, J. R. Pheasant and W. S. McCurdy, Harry Irvin, W. H. Poorman. The meeting was called to order at one o'clock by Captain Fry. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Mr. Miller, of Harrisburg, after which Rev. J. O. C. McCracken, of Johnstown, delivered an interesting address. He told of his pleasure in being present and lauded the achievements of Company E during the war. In a most eloquent and forcible manner he outlined the purpose of the meeting, which was the launching of the project to erect a suitable monument to the memory of Company E, at Baileyville, and the endeavor to have it completed in time for dedication at the fiftieth anniversary of the departure of the boys for the seat of war. The fiftieth anniversary will be September 1, 1911. Others to speak included D. F. Fortney and W. C. Heinle, of Bellefonte.

During the day two interesting games of baseball were played. In the morning the Dungarvin team defeated the Baileyville club, 10—8. In the afternoon the State College team won from a mixed team from Tyrone, the score being 3—1.

A young man by the name of Smith, from Marengo, who was playing on the Dungarvin team, was hit on the head by a ball and sustained injuries which for a time threatened to be quite serious. His condition now shows much improvement.

Howard.

A very pleasant and happy family reunion last week was that of the family of the venerable William H. Neff and wife. This interesting social event was occasioned by the visit of their son Edward who resides in Chicago and whose visits to his former home are at long intervals. Several of their other children were present while members of still other families were there to represent. The day was most pleasantly spent in family reminiscences and made happy for the time being the aged couple.

Editor Dunham of the "Hustler" thinks that hand composition is too slow for an enterprising newspaper and is accordingly installing a two-letter junior Mergenthaler linotype. The machine has been shipped and he expects to have it in operation soon. When Fred gets his type mill running the editorial force of the local sheet will have to be true to the name of the publication and his scissors will not have a chance to rust while the paste pot will need replenishing daily. So much for Fred's enterprise and we hope he may have an added degree of success and never burn his fingers.

Two of our handsome Walnut street homes that come to our notice are those of A. A. Pletcher and William Loder. The former is being made more modern by the installation of a heating plant and bath room while the latter will be more commodious at the completion of the kitchen, now in course of erection.

Zara S. Welch, one of the aged residents of this community, left last week for Westfield, Tioga county, where he is visiting the scenes of his boyhood days. It is fifty-two years since Mr. Welch left there and he will no doubt find many changes since his residence there.

Mrs. Elsie Keagle and daughters left last week for State College where they will have charge of one of the large fraternity houses during the coming term.

William Roberts, wife and family, of Pitcairn, are visiting their many relatives in this vicinity.

Miss Mary Allison, of Nittany, and Mary, Catherine and Marguerite Allison, of Roaring Branch, were guests 1 st week at the home of Mrs. S. H. Bennison.

Photographer J. L. Bush, who had been located here for some time, has closed his studio and returned to Lock Haven.

Edward Taylor, eldest son of Rev. and Mrs. R. S. Taylor, has gone to West Virginia, where he has secured a position in a railroad office. Here's hoping that Edward may some day be superintendent.

Charles Bowes has gone to Utica, N. Y., to continue at his work at bridge building.

Mrs. H. S. Pletcher and daughter, Miss Alice, are sojourning at that delightful resort, Atlantic City, for a brief period, after which the latter will resume her millinery duties.

Mrs. Crissman and sons, Ray and George, of California, Pa., are visiting relatives in this vicinity.

Ronald Welch left a few days since for Sterling Run, where he is visiting relatives.

ARRESTED WRONG MAN

Happened to Have Same Name and Same Hue of Hair as Man Wanted.

Constable Pettingill, of Allison township, went to Bellefonte on Friday, last, with a warrant issued from the office of 'Squire Rosser at Mill Hall, charging a young man employed on the state road there with trifling with the affections of a young woman, etc., says the Lock Haven "Democrat." The constable approached the foreman of the job, and asked if the young man (giving his name) was employed on the job. The foreman gave an affirmative answer and pointed out the young man, who had red hair and otherwise tallied with the description given the constable. The blonde young man said the name in the warrant was his name where upon he was placed under arrest, and the constable started with him for the office of a Bellefonte justice of the peace. The young man said he had never been at Mill Hall, had no acquaintance with the young woman who made the information and was innocent of the charge, adding that he had only been married a week, and that the news of arrest would prostrate his young wife. After a moment's thought the prisoner's countenance lit up, for he informed the constable that there was another auburn-haired young man on the job by the same name, but who was no relative of his, and that it was, no doubt, this chap who was wanted. Such proved to be the case, for on returning with his innocent victim, the constable approached the blonde young man No. 2, who admitted his identity and that he was acquainted with the young woman in question. Prisoner No. 1 was accordingly released, and the auburn-haired prisoner No 2, was escorted to the office of a justice of the peace, where he gave the proper bond for his appearance at the next term of Clinton county court.

An Enjoyable Reunion.

The Hunter-Bailey-Thomas-Beemer reunion and picnic was held at Agar's park, Mill Hall, Thursday August 18, and there was a large number of the descendants present, a conservative estimate of the number being 175, says the Lock Haven "Express."

The children enjoyed themselves on the merry-go-round while the young ladies and gentlemen enjoyed themselves on the dancing floor, music being furnished by an orchestra from Lock Haven. The out of town descendants and friends were: Harry Hunter, wife and children, Flemington; Joseph Krape, Milesburg; Walt Smith, Berwick; John Davy, Blanchard; Dr. Edward Smith, Williamsport; E. J. Morrison and wife, Jersey Shore; Mrs. Hettie Shook, Williamsport; Mrs. J. L. Ripka, Williamsport; Miss Daisy Hovner, Mt. Jewett; Mrs. Lizzie McCafferty and family, Bellefonte; Clarence McCafferty and wife, Bellefonte; Mrs. Lucy Baney, Bellefonte; Miss Muffley, Howard; Miss Kane, Howard; Miss Thomas, Howard; Mr. J. Shaffer, Flemington; Ralph Bower and family, Williamsport; Mrs. Conser, Lock Haven; Mrs. John Reeder, Lock Haven; Mrs. George Waite, Bellefonte; Mrs. W. Thomas, Bellefonte; Stewart Crispen and wife, Watsontown; Lester Crispen, DuBois; Clair Hickoff and family, Lock Haven; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Shaffer, Benezette; Mrs. Mame Armstrong, Warren.

It was unanimously decided to hold the next reunion at Agar's park in August, 1911, after which the following officers were elected: I. T. Hunter, president; T. J. Hickoff, secretary; E. J. Morrison, treasurer.

Warning to Mothers.

State Commissioner of Health Samuel G. Dixon, at Harrisburg, yesterday, issued a warning to mothers and others in care of babies and young children to be prepared for the cold wave which the United States weather bureau forecasts for the latter part of this week.

Doctor Dixon points out that too great care in the matter of heavier clothing in such changes of weather cannot be taken. His statement follows:

"Should the people of Pennsylvania meet with the sudden cold wave on Friday or Saturday predicted by Prof. Willis L. Moore, chief of the weather bureau at Washington, D. C., those in care of infants and young children should be prepared to clothe the body warmly to prevent the chilling of the stomach and abdomen. This season of the year the sudden fall of temperature in the evenings arrests digestion and causes digestive disturbances which often prove serious. A light flannel shirt, if placed over the body of the child when the weather becomes suddenly very cool, will often prevent a severe illnees."

Veteran Club Picnic.

The annual picnic and meeting of the Centre County Veteran Club will be held this year at Centre Hall, on Tuesday, September 13. As was the case last year, the meeting will be held during the week of grangers picnic and on the picnic grounds. The Executive Committee of the club held a meeting on Saturday, last, to plan for the picnic. In the absence of Judge Beaver, Captain W. H. Fry was called to the chair and stated the purpose of the meeting. Committees were appointed as follows: Grounds and music—Captain G. M. Boal; Transportation—General John I. Curtin and Captain S. H. Williams; Speakers—W. H. Musser and Captain W. H. Fry; Printing—W. H. Musser.

Wedded at Bellefonte.

Irvin Korman, of Oak Hall, and Miss Leda Shuey, of State College, were married by Rev. Dr. Ambrose M. Schmidt, on Tuesday morning, last, at the Reformed church parsonage, in Bellefonte. The young couple are well known among a large circle of friends, all of whom wish them much happiness and prosperity.

"BACK TO THE FARM"

VI.—Farming—The Young Man's Opportunity.

By C. V. GREGORY.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

TO the young man on the threshold of life the question of "What shall I do with myself?" comes demanding an answer. During the past fifty years the call of the city to the ambitious young man has been insistent. Today the country is calling for men with ambition and energy and faith in its possibilities. To such men it offers unequaled opportunities.

The opportunities of the farm are not limited in size or extent. The young man with capital who is looking for a business opening finds it on the farm. The farm offers him the opportunity to exercise his executive ability by managing broad acres and herds that number in the thousands. If his taste runs to quality rather than quantity it offers him chances in the pure bred stock business for the broadest use of his money and talents. There is no occupation more fascinating than the molding of living animals to make them conform to an ideal of perfection. There is opportunity for long continued study of blood lines; there are months and years of anxious waiting to see the results of the union of certain families; there are moments of disappointment when an animal fails to develop as well as expected. But greatest of all is the joy of success when the breeder's efforts are crowned with an animal a little nearer perfection than has been produced before. The man who can see such an animal march out of a crowded show ring with the purple ribbon without a feeling that at least in a measure he has achieved success has ambitions that are indeed hard to satisfy. The pure bred business has some pitfalls, but to the man who enters it with good judgment and an ambition to succeed it offers financial returns that can be exceeded in few other occupations.

To the young man starting without capital the farm offers unequaled opportunities. The young man with a few friends and a reputation for industry and honesty finds it easy to rent a farm and borrow enough capital to equip it. There is a risk to run, of course. But what is a risk to a young man with strength and ambition? Well considered risks are essential to success in almost any line, and to the young farmer they are an incentive to greater effort. Now that prices of farm products have reached a profitable level paying off the debt is a matter of but a few years. Buying the farm itself is by no means impossible, even in the most fertile sections of the corn belt.

Hundreds of farmers are looking for managers for farms that vary in size and equipment to suit the fancy of any one. This line offers some of the greatest opportunities to the young man without capital. The salaries at first may seem small as compared with some of those offered in the city. Usually they include board and incidentals, however. There is a better chance to lay up money on the farm at $50 a month than in the city at twice that amount. For the man who can "make good" the first year's salary is hardly an indication of what is to follow. Most landowners are willing to advance the salary as fast as the manager shows his ability. Better yet, they are willing to intrust more of the responsibility to his hands and to give him more capital, so that he can achieve greater results. In most cases after a man has shown what he is worth it is easy for him to get a share of the net profits in addition to his salary. In many cases it is easy to get in on a partnership basis. In either case the manager is as independent as if he owned the farm, and the chances for financial success are nearly as great.

The great advantage of a position of this kind or, in fact, of any kind of farm work is that there are so many chances to invest money as fast as it is made.

The man on the farm has a dozen places to invest every dollar. This in itself is a big incentive to saving, and saving means prosperity for both the individual and the nation. The investment which offers the greatest returns is farm land. Even in those localities where land is now worth considerably more than $100 an acre the price limit is yet far from being reached. There is little chance to lose money on land provided it is wisely invested. It is the lack of knowledge of what constitutes a good farm that makes land an unsafe investment for the city man. There may be some honest land agents, but unfortunately they have no trademark to distinguish them from the other variety. To buy land without seeing it is a painless way of parting with hard earned money. As for the promised profits, they usually find their way to the pockets of the land agent, leaving the investor a sadder and wiser man.

Between 1900 and 1906 the average increase in the value of the farm land in the United States was 38 per cent. Between 1900 and 1910 much of the land in the western part of the Mississippi valley doubled in value. With a system of farming that keeps up the fertility prices will go higher rather than lower.

The man who owns a farm has continual opportunities to put his money into better fences, better stock and better buildings. He has opportunities to invest in more land at home or farther west.

From a financial standpoint farming offers opportunities to young men that are duplicated in few other callings. Farming as a profession is new, and its ranks are still far from full. The young farmer is not entering an overcrowded calling where he must combine with his fellows and boost prices unnaturally in order to make a bare living. In agriculture there are room and opportunity for all. The country is throbbing with the vitality of a new awakened life. The password is ambition, and the reward is success.

It is not the call of money alone that is turning the ambitious young man to the farm. A calling that can offer no reward but a financial one is scarcely worthy of the name. The chief call of the city has been the call of the dollar combined with the call of the crowd. Better roads and a denser population have enabled the country to offer a social life which is superior to that of the city. Higher prices and scientific methods have enabled it to duplicate the financial rewards of the city. In addition, it offers to the young man the opportunity to live the broadest, fullest life of which he is capable. It offers him a business he can call his own and an independence which he could gain in the city only after a lifetime of toil. The greatest need of most rural communities just now is leaders—men who can demonstrate on their own farms the possibilities of scientific agriculture; men who understand the possibilities and the need of a broader community life.

The stories of some of the young men who heeded the call of the country and gave themselves to the development of their community read like romances. A dozen years or so ago a little Massachusetts community was on the downhill road. The nearby cities had sapped it of its strength and vigor. Injudicious cropping had taken away much of the fertility of the soil, and the people had lost all ambition and were content to let things drift from bad to worse. About this time a young man, a son of one of the farmers, graduated from an agricultural college. He received a tempting offer from the department of agriculture to take up work at Washington. A brother in Iowa wrote him a glowing invitation to come to the fertile lands of the middle west. He rejected both offers and went home.

The most optimistic resident would have laughed at the idea of there being any opportunity there. But the young man went to work. He did not lecture to the neighbors or advise them. He merely set out to show them what the impoverished land was capable of. He made the old farm pay, and its dilapidation changed to an air of prosperity. His neighbors gradually began to follow his methods and to catch some of his spirit. The community started to go forward instead of backward. As soon as he could spare the time from his farm the young farmer set about reorganizing the village school. He gave one corner of his farm for a school garden. He invited the preacher out to his farm and got him out of the atmosphere of dead theology into the spirit of living progress. The preacher caught the spirit, and the church came to be an aid in the forward movement. Gradually the whole community became modernized. The people grasped the opportunities to which they were blind until some one opened their eyes.

The young man who can go into a community and by his indomitable courage and strong faith bring about a change like this has succeeded in the truest sense of the word. It is success of this kind, coupled with the success of a happy life and a comfortable competence, that the country offers to the young man today.

PREVENTING HOG CHOLERA

A government experiment station issued the following bulletin on hog cholera, in which it lays out good methods for preventing the disease

Proper methods of feeding and care are necessary in order to keep the herd in a healthy, growing condition. Healthy hogs possess a slight degree of resistance against disease, and this factor plays no small part in the control of hog cholera. Filthy, crowded quarters, lack of exercise and wrong methods of feeding overcome natural immunity and are secondary factors in the spread of disease.

There is no place on a farm where disinfectants are so necessary as in the hog houses and yards. Whitewash, lime, chloride of lime and stock dips are the disinfectants commonly used. Pastures and lots may be cleaned up by moving the hogs for a few months each year and cleaning away all litter. The unused lots can be put to good use if plowed and sowed to some forage crop.

Necessary precautions against the food and drinking water becoming con

HUSKY BERKSHIRES

[By courtesy of Iowa State college.]

taminated must be observed. The importance of clean water, clean feed and clean troughs and feeding floors should be emphasized. Muddy yards when in use a few years become filthy and endanger the health of the herd.

Yards should be well drained and all wallow holes filled. Pens and pastures through which the drainage from swine inclosures higher up runs should not be used.

Hogs coming from other herds or stock shows should be excluded from the home herd until they are positive shown to be free from disease. They should be quarantined in yards set off for this purpose. Such yards should not communicate in any way with the regular yards. They should also be cleaned by dipping or washing with a water solution of a reliable disinfectant as there is a possibility of carrying germs in the dust and dirt on their bodies. The quarantine period should be longer than the average period of incubation. Three weeks is as long as is necessary.

The possible introduction of the disease into the pens by people, dogs birds, etc., should be guarded against especially if cholera is present in the neighborhood. Whenever it is necessary for a person to enter a hog lot where the disease is present the shoes should be cleaned and disinfected on leaving. Persons taking care of cholera hogs should observe the necessary precautions against the distribution of the disease and see that others practice like precautions.

FEEDING THE PIGS.

Peculiarities of Animal's Structure Necessitate Concentrated Foods.

A small stomach and an extensive intestinal canal are peculiarities of the pig's structure which have to be considered in the matter of feeding in the opinion of a prominent swine herder. The smallness of the stomach indicates the necessity of concentrated food, and the large intestinal canal points to the fact that a large quantity of food can be disposed of.

While it is obvious, however, that concentrated food is adapted to the pig's organism, it is inadvisable that it should be given an unlimited diet of this food. Potatoes, etc., may not be so excellent for the purposes of development as barley meal, but a certain quantity of these not only reduces the feeding bill, but diminishes the risk of overfeeding.

Recent experiments have shown that fatting pigs should be fed at least three times a day, and a third meal given as late in the evening as possible, should be the heaviest. The roots which suit pigs best are swedes and potatoes.

We have known cases where cabbages have been fed to fatten pigs, but they are of no use. Skimmilk, barley meal and potatoes are excellent for pushing the carcass along, but there does not appear to be much advantage in boiling the tubers.

Carrots For Cattle.

Those who have one or two cows and a piece of ground that may be tilled should not fail to sow a few rows of half long carrot seed. If sown by hand the seed should be scattered so as to make a row of a couple of inches broad. They may be sown fifteen to sixteen inches apart. Keep them clean, but do not thin them when the seed has been prudently sown. When autumn comes the amount of good food furnished will be a matter of surprise. Until freezing weather the carrots may be simply pulled up and fed without chopping or slicing.

Alfalfa Is Excellent Feed.

Alfalfa is an excellent feeding stuff where it can be obtained. Hogs relish it either when green or when it has been properly cured for hay. It is very helpful if the brood sow has access to pasture. It not only helps provide the proper food, but it affords a place for exercise which is very essential.

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION SUBMITTED TO THE CITIZENS OF THIS COMMONWEALTH FOR THEIR APPROVAL OR REJECTION, BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, AND PUBLISHED BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF THE COMMONWEALTH, IN PURSUANCE OF ARTICLE XVIII OF THE CONSTITUTION.

Number One.

A CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section twenty-six of article five of the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Resolved (if the Senate concur), That the following amendment to section twenty-six of article five of the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section 26 of Article V., which reads as follows: "Section 26. All laws relating to courts shall be general and of uniform operation, and the organization, jurisdiction, and powers of all courts of the same class or grade, so far as regulated by law, and the force and effect of the process and judgments of such courts, shall be uniform; and the General Assembly is hereby prohibited from creating other courts to exercise the powers vested by this Constitution in the judges of the Courts of Common Pleas and Orphans' Courts," be amended so that the same shall read as follows:—

Section 26. All laws relating to courts shall be general and of uniform operation, and the organization, jurisdiction, and powers of all courts of the same class or grade, so far as regulated by law, and the force and effect of the process and judgments of such courts, shall be uniform; but, notwithstanding any provisions of this Constitution, the General Assembly shall have full power to establish new courts, from time to time, as the same may be needed in any city or county, and to prescribe the powers and jurisdiction thereof, and to increase the number of judges in any courts now existing or hereafter created, or to reorganize the same, or to vest in other courts the jurisdiction theretofore exercised by courts not of record, and to abolish the same wherever it may be deemed necessary for the orderly and efficient administration of justice.

Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Number Two.

RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to eliminate the requirement of payment of taxes as a qualification of the right to vote.

Resolved (if the House of Representatives concur), That the following amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:

That section one of article eight be amended, by striking out the fourth numbered paragraph thereof, so that the said section shall read as follows:

Section 1. Every male citizen twenty-one years of age, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections, subject however to such laws requiring and regulating the registration of electors as the General Assembly may enact.

First. He shall have been a citizen of the United States at least one month.

Second. He shall have resided in the State one year (or if, having previously been a qualified elector or native-born citizen of the State, he shall have removed therefrom and returned, then six months), immediately preceding the election.

Third. He shall have resided in the election district where he shall offer to vote at least two months immediately preceding the election.

ROBERT McAFEE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Number Three.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to consolidate the courts of common pleas of Allegheny County.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section six of article five be amended, by striking out the said section, and inserting in place thereof the following:

Section 6. In the county of Philadelphia all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the district courts and courts of common pleas, subject to such changes as may be made by this Constitution or by law, shall be in Philadelphia vested in five distinct and separate courts of equal and co-ordinate jurisdiction, composed of three judges each. The said courts in Philadelphia shall be designated respectively as the court of common pleas number one, number two, number three, number four, and number five, but the number of said courts may be by law increased, from time to time, and shall be in like manner designated by successive numbers. The number of judges in any of said courts, or in any county where the establishment of an additional court may be authorized by law, may be increased, from time to time, and whenever such increase shall amount in the whole to three, such three judges shall compose a distinct and separate court as aforesaid, which shall be numbered as aforesaid. In Philadelphia all suits shall be instituted in the said courts of common pleas without designating the number of the said court, and the several courts shall distribute and apportion the business among them in such manner as shall be provided by rules of court, and each court, to which any suit shall be thus assigned, shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof, subject to change of venue, as shall be provided by law.

In the county of Allegheny all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the several numbered courts of common pleas shall be vested in one court of common pleas, composed of all the judges in commission in said courts. Such jurisdiction and powers shall extend to all proceedings at law and in equity which shall have been instituted in the several numbered courts, and shall be subject to such changes as may be made by law, and subject to change of venue as provided by law. The president judge of said court shall be selected as provided by law. The number of judges in said court may be by law increased from time to time. This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January succeeding its adoption.

ROBERT McAFEE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Number Four.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof:—

Amendment to Article Nine, Section Eight.

Section 1. Amend section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:—

"Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation," so as to read as follows:—

Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation, except that any debt or debts hereinafter incurred by the city and county of Philadelphia for the construction and development of subways for transit purposes, or for the construction of wharves and docks, or the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of a system of wharves and docks, as public improvements, owned or to be owned by said city and county of Philadelphia, and which shall yield to the city and county of Philadelphia current net revenue in excess of the interest on said debt or debts and of the annual installments necessary for the cancellation of said debt or debts, may be excluded in ascertaining the power of the city and county of Philadelphia to become otherwise indebted: Provided, That a sinking fund for their cancellation shall be established and maintained.

The Boy Knew.

Dr. J. M. Buckley, the well-known editor and divine, addressing a New York City Sunday school, related an incident that greatly interested the children. He told of meeting a ragged hungry-looking little girl in the street on a wintry day, and when he questioned her she recited a pitiful tale of a sick mother and younger brothers and sisters without food. After giving her a silver dollar the good doctor followed at a safe distance to see what she would do with the money.

"Now, children, what do you suppose was the first thing she bought with that dollar?" said Dr. Buckley. Hands up!"

Up went the hands, and one child after another ventured a guess, but none proved correct. Finally a little boy, whose upraised hand alone remained was asked for his answer to the question.

"A basket," he sang out.

"Correct," said the doctor; "there's a boy who thinks. Now, son, come up here on the platform and tell us why you think it was a basket."

After considerable coaxing the boy reached the platform, but seemed unwilling to talk. "Go on," urged the doctor. "I want these boys and girls o learn to think, too."

The boy still hesitated, and Dr. Buckley took from his pocket a silver quarter. "I'll give you this," he said, "if you'll tell us what makes you think the little girl bought a basket first."

"Be-be-cause," stammered the youngster, at last moved by the sight of the money, "I was over in Hoboken last Sunday and heard you tell the story there."—Harper's Magazine.

The GOOSE GIRL

By HAROLD MacGRATH

Copyright, 1909, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"Yes, there will be other kings. I am sorry. What young girl has not her dream of romance? But princesses must not have romances. Yours, my child, must be a political marriage. It is a harsh decree."

"My highness will or will not marry, as she pleases. Am I a chattel that I am to be offered across this frontier or that?"

"I SHALL NEED THE WHOLE ROOM TO DANCE IN."

The chancellor moved uneasily.

"You will, then, tell the duke that you have changed your mind, that you have reconsidered?" he persisted.

"This evening. Now, godfather, you may kiss her serene highness on the forehead."

"This honor to me?" The chancellor trembled.

"Even so."

He did not touch her with his hands, but the kiss he put on her forehead was a benediction.

"You may go now," she said, "for I shall need the whole room to dance in. I am free, if only for a little while!"

CHAPTER VI.

GRETCHEN'S DAY.

GRETCHEN was always up when the morning was rosy, when the trees were still dark and motionless and the beads of dew white and frostlike, for what is better than to meet the day as it comes over the mountains and silence breaks here and there in the houses and streets, in the fields and the vineyards? Let old age, which has played its part and taken to the wings of the stage—let old age loiter in the morning, but not green years. Gretchen awoke as the birds awoke, with snatches and little trills of song. To her nearest neighbors there was about her that which reminded them of the regularity of a good clock; when they heard her voice they knew it was time to get up.

She was always busy in the morning. The tinkle of the bell outside brought her to the door, and her two goats came pattering in to be relieved of their creamy burden. Gretchen was fond of them. They needed no care at all. The moment she had milked them they went tinkling off to the steep pastures.

Even in midsummer the dawn was chill in Dreiberg. Gretchen blew on her fingers. The fire began its cheerful crackle, the kettle boiled briskly, and the frugal breakfast was under way.

There was daily one cup of coffee, but neither Gretchen nor her grandmother claimed this luxury; it was for the sick woman on the third floor.

What the character of the woman's illness was Gretchen hadn't an idea, but there could be no doubt that she was ill, desperately, had the goose girl but known it. Her face was thin and the bones were visible under the drumlike skin; her hands were merely claws. She mystified the girl, for she never complained, never asked questions, talked but little, and always smiled kindly when the pillow was freshened.

"Good morning, frau," said Gretchen.

"Good morning, liebchen."

"I have brought you a brick this morning, for it will be cold till the sun is high."

"Thank you."

Gretchen pulled the deal table to the side of the cot, poured out the coffee and buttered the bread.

"I ought not to drink coffee, but it is the only thing that warms me. You have been very patient with me."

"I am glad to help you."

"And that is why I love you. Now, I have some instructions to give you this morning. Presently I shall be leaving, and there will be something besides crowns."

"You are thinking of leaving?"

"Yes. When I go I shall not come back. Under my pillow there is an envelope. You will find it and keep it."

Gretchen, young and healthy, touched not this melancholy undercurrent.

"You will promise to take it?"

"Yes, frau."

"Thanks, little gosling. I have an errand for you this morning. It will take you to the palace."

"To the palace!" echoed Gretchen. "What shall I do?"

"You will seek her highness and give her this note."

"The princess! Will they not laugh and turn me out?"

"If they try that, demand to see his excellency Count von Herbeck and say that you came from No. 40 Krumerweg."

"And if I cannot get in?"

"You will have no trouble. Be sure, though, to give the note to no one but her highness."

Gretchen decked her beautiful head with a little white cap, which she wore only on Sundays and at the opera, and braided and ribboned her hair. Who was this old woman who thought nothing of writing a letter to her serene highness? And who were her nocturnal visitors? she pondered.

Being of a discerning mind, she idled about the Platz till after 9, for it had been told to her that the great sleep rather late in the morning. What should she say to her serene highness? What kind of courtesy should she make? At least she would wear no humble, servile air, for Gretchen was a bit of a Socialist. Did not Herr Goldberg, whom the police detested—did he not say that all men were equal? And surely this sweeping statement included women. With a confidence born of right and innocence she proceeded toward the east or side gates of the palace. The sentry smiled at her.

"I have a letter for her serene highness," she said.

"Leave it."

"I am under orders to give it to her highness herself."

"You cannot enter the gardens without a permit."

Gretchen remembered. "Will you send some one to his excellency the chancellor and tell him I have come from No. 40 Krumerweg?"

"Krumerweg! The very name ought to close any gate. But, girl, are you speaking truthfully?"

Gretchen exhibited the note. He scratched his chin, perplexed.

"Run along. If they ask me I'll say that I didn't see you." The sentry resumed his beat.

Gretchen stepped inside the gates, and the real beauty of the gardens

"IN YOUR PRESENCE, HIGHNESS?"

was revealed to her for the first time—strange flowers she had never seen before. It was all a fairyland. There were marble urns with hanging vines and marble statues.

A hand grasped her rudely by the arm.

"What are you doing here?" thundered the head gardener. "Be off with you!"

"How dare you touch me like that?" she cried angrily.

Something in her glance cooled even the warm blooded Hermann.

"But you live in Dreiberg and ought to know."

"You could have told me without bruising my arm," defiantly.

"Hermann!"

Gretchen and the head gardener whirled. Through a hedge which divided the formal gardens from the tennis and archery grounds came a young woman in riding habit.

"What is the trouble, Hermann?" she inquired.

"Your highness, this young woman here had the impudence to walk into the gardens."

"Has she stolen any flowers?"

"Why, no, your highness, but it is not customary."

"We, you and I, Hermann," said her highness, with a smile that won Gretchen on the spot, "will overlook this first offense. Perhaps this young lady had some errand and lost her way."

"Yes, your highness," replied Gretchen eagerly.

"Ah! You may go, Hermann."

Hermann bowed, gathered up his pruning knives and scissors, which he had let fall, and stalked down the path.

"Whom were you seeking?" her highness asked, rather startled by the undeniable beauty of this peasant.

"I was seeking your serene highness. I live at No. 40 the Krumerweg.

"Krumerweg?" Her highness reached for the note and read it, and as she read tears gathered in her eyes. "Follow me," she said. She led Gretchen to a marble bench and sat down.

"What is your name?"

"Gretchen, highness."

"Well, Gretchen, sit down."

"In your presence, highness?" aghast.

"Don't bother about my presence on a morning like this. Sit down."

This was a command, and Gretchen obeyed with alacrity. The two sat mutely. They were strangely alike. Their eyes nearly matched, their hair, even the shape of their faces. They were similarly molded, too, only one was slender and graceful after the manner of fashion, while the other was slender and graceful directly from the hands of nature. The marked difference lay, of course, in their hands. The princess had never toiled with her fingers except on the piano. Gretchen had plucked geese and dug vegetables with hers. They were rough, but toil had not robbed them of their natural grace.

"How was she?" her highness asked.

"About the same, highness."

"Have you wondered why she should write to me?"

"Highness, it was natural that I should," was Gretchen's frank admission.

"She took me in when nobody knew who I was, clothed and fed me and taught me music so that some day I should not be helpless when the battle of life began. Ah," impulsively, "had I my way she would be housed in the palace, not in the lonely Krumerweg. But my father does not know that she is in Dreiberg, and we dare not tell him, for he still believes that she had something to do with my abduction." Then she stopped. She was strangely making this peasant her confidant. What a whim!

Gretchen did not move. She saw that her highness was dreaming, and she herself had dreams.

"Do you like music?"

"Highness, I am always singing."

"La, la, la!" sang the princess capriciously.

"La, la, la!" sang Gretchen, smiling. Her voice was not purer or sweeter; it was merely stronger, having been accustomed to the open air.

"Brava!" cried the princess. "Who taught you to sing?"

"Nobody, highness."

"What do you do?"

"I am a goose girl. In the fall and winter I work at odd times in the Black Eagle."

"Tell me all about yourself."

This was easy for Gretchen; there was so little.

"Neither mother nor father. Our lives are something alike. A handsome girl like you must have a sweetheart."

Gretchen blushed. "Yes, highness. I am to be married soon. He is a vintner. I would not trade him for your king, highness," with a spice of boldness.

Her highness did not take offense. Rather she liked this frankness. It was a taste of the old days when she herself could have chosen a vintner and married him with none to say her nay. She surrendered to impulse.

"Gretchen, I do not think I shall marry the king of Jugendheit."

Gretchen grew red with pride.

"You love some one else, highness?"

Her highness did not blush.

"You must not ask questions like that, Gretchen."

This was not understandable to Gretchen, but a locket the princess wore pleased her eye. Her highness, observing her interest, slipped the trinket from her neck and laid it in Gretchen's hand.

"Open it," she said. "It is a picture of my mother, whom I do not recollect having ever seen. I will open it for you." Click!

Gretchen sighed deeply. To have had a mother so fair and pretty! She hadn't an idea how her own mother had looked. Indeed, being sensible and not given much to conjuring, she had rarely bothered her head about it. Still, as she gazed at this portrait the sense of her isolation and loneliness drew down upon her, and she in her turn sought the flowers and saw them not. After awhile she closed the locket and returned it.

"So you love music?" picking up the safer thread.

"Ah, yes, highness."

"I will give you an opera ticket for the season. How can I reward you for bringing this message? Don't have any false pride. Ask for something."

"Well, then, highness, give me an order on the grand duke's head vintner for a place."

"For the man who is to become your husband?"

"Yes, highness."

"You shall have it tomorrow. Now, come with me. I am going to take you to Herr Ernst. He is the direktor of the opera. He rehearses in the court theater this morning."

Gretchen followed the princess. As her highness entered the Bijou theater the herr direktor stopped the music. In the little gallery which served as the royal box sat several ladies and gentlemen of the court, the grand duke being among them.

"I have brought you a prima donna, Herr Direktor," pointing to Gretchen.

Herr Direktor showed his teeth.

"What shall she sing in, your highness? We are rehearsing 'The Bohemian Girl,'" he jested.

The chorus and singers on the little stage exchanged smiles.

"I want your first violin," said her highness.

"Anton!"

A youth stood up in the orchestral pit.

"Now, your highness," said the herr direktor.

"Try her voice."

And the herr direktor saw that she was not smiling. He bade the violinist to draw his bow over a single note.

"Imitate it, Gretchen," commanded her highness, "and don't be afraid."

Gretchen lifted her voice. It was sweeter and mellower than the violin.

"Again!" the herr direktor cried.

Without apparent effort Gretchen passed from one note to another, now high, now low, or strong or soft; a trill, a run. The violinist of his own accord began the jewel song from "Faust." Gretchen did not know the words, but she carried the melody without mishap. And then "I Dreamt I Dwelt In Marble Halls." This song she knew word for word, and, ah, she sang it with strange and haunting tenderness. One by one the musicians dropped their instruments to their knees. All realized that a great voice was being tried before them. The herr direktor struck his music stand sharply.

"Your highness has played a fine jest this day. Where does madame your guest sing—in Berlin or Vienna?"

"In neither," answered her highness. "She lives in Dreiberg, and till this morning I never saw her before."

The herr direktor stared blankly from her highness to Gretchen and back to her highness again. Then he grasped it. Here was one of those moments when the gods make gifts to mortals.

"You have a great voice, fraulein. I shall teach you. I shall make you a great singer."

But Gretchen never became a prima donna. There was something different on the knees of the gods.

STOCK RAISING AT COLLEGE

Plan Extending Course in Animal Husbandry Next Year.

The course in Animal Husbandry at State College will be greatly improved for the coming year. Prof. W. A. Cochel, the new head of this department, has strengthened the teaching force and has also bought about $5000 more of pure blooded cattle, sheep and swine, for experimental purposes. Prof. Cochel expects to raise about 50 head of steers, a carload of draught geldings and 40 head of hogs for market during the year. These animals will be as fine as money can buy and will be sold to farmers, so that they may improve their stock. According to Prof. Cochel the Animal Husbandry course at State for next year will be second to none in the country.

The Experimental work of the Animal Husbandry Department consists of feeding, breeding and management of horses, beef cattle, sheep, swine and poultry. During the past year two carloads of market cattle were fed to determine the most profitable methods of fattening cattle in Pennsylvania. The results showed that corn silage is one of the most economic feeds for beef production, when supplemented with a small amount of cottonseed meal and a limited grain ration; that corn fed cattle in an open shed returned 11 cents per pound more than when fed in a closed barn and that the local demand outside larger cities is for butcher cattle or good killers rather than for prime animals.

Experiments in feeding grade draft horses, curing meat for farm use and in fitting hogs for slaughter will be conducted during the next year. In the Poultry Department experiments on feeding laying hens, methods of handling eggs before hatching and in fitting cockerels for market are now in progress.

For instructional work in livestock judging the college maintains pure bred herds of Aberdeen Angus, Shorthorn and Polled Durham cattle, Shropshire and Chester White hogs, pens of pure bred White Wyandotts, White Leghorns, Barred Plymouth Rocks and Rhode Island Red chickens. In addition to these pure bred animals there are thirty head of draft and harness horses, fifty steers, sixty hogs, twenty-five sheep and about two thousand chickens which are used for experimental and instructional work.

Courses are offered in Live Stock Breeding, Feeding, Management and Slaughtering for market. Breeding, Care and Management and Feeding of Poultry and Incubation and Brooding of young chicks. All class work is arranged in such a manner that the students will obtain a maximum amount of practical work along with their class room exercises.

Tit For Tat.

Although he was pretty glad to take in summer boarders, and thus make capital of his small garden produce and his wife's excellent cooking, Jebediah Hubbard always made a great point of never letting his guests "get ahead of him" in any way.

"City folks that have been around a mite think they know it all from A to Izzard," he used to say. "They need somebody to take 'em down a peg or two once in a while.

One morning, while he was chewing a long spear of grass near the wood yard, says Youth's Companion, he was surprised to see a newly arrived boarder, fully dressed, coming toward him. This propensity of "city fellers" to rise at "sun-up" was quite irregular.

"Good morning" explained the newcomer in a lusty tone.

"Morning," responded the old man, as if uncertain just what to expect.

"Well, I s'pose you have to get up early to see that the haycocks crow properly, don't you?" said the city man, with an airy, jocular familiarity which Jebediah was not slow to resent.

"Well, no," he drawled, "not exactly that—I was just out untying some of the knots in the cordwood."

Why he Broke it Off.

Bellefonte Has to Bow to the Inevitable—Scores of Citizens Prove it.

After reading the public statement of this representative citizen of Bellefonte given below, you must come to this conclusion: A remedy which cured years ago, which has kept the kidneys in good health since, can be relied upon to perform the same work in other cases. Read this:

William McClellan, 244 E. Lamb St., Bellefonte, Pa., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills fixed me up in good shape and consequently I think highly of them. I suffered for a long time from a pain and lameness across my back and some mornings I could hardly get out of bed. My bach ached constantly and the kidney secretions were irregular in passage. Hearing a great deal about Doan's Kidney Pills, I decided to give them a trial and procured a supply from Green's Pharmacy Co. They cured me and I am now enjoying good health. My advice to anyone afflicted with kidney complaint is to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial." (Statement given Oct. 21, 1907.)

Re-endorsement. Mr. McClellan was interviewed on Nov. 23, 1909 and he said: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pill once or twice during the past two years, while suffering from backache and they have given me prompt relief. You are welcome to publish my testimonial at any time you desire."

Japanese Wife.

A Japanese wife is more than a wife. She is an artist, says Adachi Kinnosuke in the Delineator. She is an artist in that most difficult of arts—and the most needful—the art of handling men. It is the consuming passion of her life. For it and in it she lives.

The woman of Nippon is not notably attractive in either face or figure. She suffers a severe handicap in comparison with English and American women. Therefore she does the next best thing—she displays policy. I believe your word for it is tact.

Of the woman of Japan there is one, just one, opinion among her judges—especially among her foreign critics—as a wife she is all gentleness and lovableness. This is quite remarkable, coming from men the world around. Whatever, may be their criticism on other things, they are all praise for the Japanese woman as a wife. There is a reason; there are more reasons than one.

In the first place, she is a past mistress in the art of commanding men, only in her case it is no longer an art—it is second nature with her. The basis, elemental qualification of a great commander of men, east and west, is and always has been this—to know how to obey. Everybody knows that. Even Napoleon knew that. Greater than he who saw St. Helena after seeing Austerlitz, the Japanese woman acts out what she knows—what she knows so well and has known so long that he is no longer even conscious of it.

15 Cents For Expenses.

Harry Cooney and Thomas Van Zandt, of Pottsville, have returned to their home after attempting to walk to San Francisco. They got as far as Denver before they were compelled to give up. The boys started on their trip with 15 cents in their pockets. Their pluck left them when they found themselves unable to procure food, and they returned in a famished condition. The boys rode home on coal trains.

The Ragged Philanthropist.

"Lady," said the tall tramp, as he emerged from behind the lilac bushes, "give me dat lawn mower a few minutes."

"Gracious!" explained the suburban housewife, "and you are really going to push it while? How nice of you."

"No, mum; I'm not going to push it. I am going to put some oil on it, so it will run easier. De squeaking disturbs de slumbers of me pards back in de gooseberry patch."

Too Valuable.

"What you want to do is to have that mud hole in the road fixed," said the visitor.

"That goes to show," replied Farmer Corntossel, "how little you reformers understand local conditions. I've purty nigh paid off a mortgage with the money I made haulin' automobiles out o' that mud hole."—Washington Star.

Here and There.

Robert Roberts, of Winburne, spent Sunday with Bellefonte friends.

Mr. and Mrs. William Derstine were visitors to State College on Sunday.

Manager Clayton Brown, of the Scenic, is at Mill Hall today, fishing for pike.

Mrs. Fred Scott departed on Monday for a week's visit with friends in Pittsburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rishel, of Pittsburg, are guests of the former's father, Thomas Rishel.

Miss Edith Cook, of Philadelphia, was last week a pleasant visitor at the home of her brother, Edward.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Charles, of Boalsburg, were greeting their numerous friends in Bellefonte this week.

The annual reunion of the Schenck family is being held today in the beautiful Schenck grove, below Howard.

Mr. and Mrs. J. McClellan Davis and son, W. Henry Davis, were Sunday visitors to their old home, at Tyrone.

The annual reunion of the Tressler family will be held on the Fair Grounds, at Bellefonte, on Saturday, September 3.

There is joy and rejoicing in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Moerschbacher over the arrival, on Friday, last, of a fine boy baby.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Garbrick, of Philadelphia are visiting at the home of the former's mother, Mrs. George Garbrick, on High Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Musser and son, of Altoona, are visiting at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Musser, on Lamb Street.

Mrs. L. F. Mayes and two of the prettiest children to be found anywhere in the world, came down from Lemont on Saturday to do some shopping.

The farmers of Buffalo Run valley, on Wednesday of last week, held a picnic at Long Reach, which is one of the inviting spots along Spring Creek.

L. T. Munson, on Monday, last, assumed charge as ticket agent for the Central Railroad, at Bellefonte. He succeeds J. C. Rumberger.

Edwards Peters, of Snow Shoe, greeted friends and transacted business in Bellefonte this week and of course, took in the business men's picnic, at Hecla.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Showers, of Buffalo, N. Y., are spending a week with Mrs. Showers' brother, former Sheriff Henry Kline, the popular proprietor of the Hotel Haag.

Misses Julia, Grace and Mildred McClellan, daughters of William McClellan, departed on Saturday for Altoona, where they will enjoy a visit with their brother, Thomas.

C. C. North and daughter, Miss Margaret, departed for Washington, D. C., on Monday, after spending Sunday at the home of the former's sister, Mrs. F. W. Crider.

Now that the trout season is over and the trout are safe for several months to come, a number of fine specimens may be seen almost any day in Spring Creek, near Beezer's garage.

Mrs. John Knisely, who has been suffering from rheumatism for some time past, is improving and resting more comfortably, which is gratifying news to her numerous fri nds.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Reeser and daughter, Pearl, of Snow Shoe, spent Sunday with Bellefonte friends and quite naturally remained over for the business men's picnic, at Hecla, on Tuesday.

We are indebted to Mrs. N. Baughman, who is a regular reader of "The Republican" and who favored us with a call on Saturday for the purpose of advancing the date on the label on her copy of the paper. Mrs. Baughman is a very genial lady and it is our hope that each week as she receives "The Republican" she will feel amply repaid for the time it required for her to personally visit our office and adjust her account.

The Library of the Lock Haven State Normal School is well selected, accurately catalogued and the books are easily accessible. The library rooms are said to be handsomer than those of any other school library in the state. The remarkable success of the school's debating team in the inter-Normal debates is due, in a large measure, to the library. Write for the school's handsome catalog.

To see Irvin Dreese, of Lemont, go flying along the street, one would suppose that he of all persons had no need for an automobile. He covers more ground than most men and at that seems to walk at an easy pace. However, walking got to be slow for him so last week he purchased a Ford automobile. Unless we are wrong in our calculations, the roads between Lemont and Bellefonte are due for some troublous times.

Mrs. James Sharp, who was formerly Miss Susan Sprankle and who for the last week had been visiting with old friends in Bellefonte and Coleville, departed on Monday, last, for her home in Trafford City. She was accompanied by a granddaughter, Miss Helen Kreamer, of Swissvale. Before departing for Trafford City Mrs. Sharp favored us with a call and became enrolled as a subscriber to "The Republican", thus making sure that she and Mr. Sharp will receive all the Centre County news during the coming year.

Mrs. A. J. Cook gave a dinner for a few friends on Wednesday.

Judge Ellis L. Orvis returned home on Saturday evening from the seashore.

T. S. Strawn reopened his brokerage room in Temple Court, on Monday, last.

Richard Taylor came over from Huntingdon to spend Sunday with old Bellefonte friends.

Harvest Home services will be held in St. John's Reformed church on Sunday morning, next, at 11 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shaughnessy, of Pittsburg, are visiting at the Shaughnessy home, on Howard Street.

Mrs. John Hinman Gibson and little daughter, Margaret, departed today for their home at Rutherford, N. J.

Miss Mary Snyder has been suffering from a very bad attack of pluresy, at her home on North Allegheny Street, during the last ten days.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Zerby, of Altoona, last week visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Rowe. Mrs. Zerby and Mrs. Rowe are sisters.

Misses Sara Caldwell and Mamie Hill returned home on Wednesday last from Ocean City, N. J., and Baltimore, Md., where they spent their vacation.

Davy Chambers, James Uzzle, J. Harris Hoy and several others from Clarence, made up a jolly automobile party that visited the business men's picnic on Tuesday.

George C. Johnson, the plumber, went up to Altoona on Tuesday to accompany Mrs. Johnson and son, Harold, home from that place after their delightful visit over Sunday at Mrs. Johnson's former home.

Hudson Crissman, a brother of W. H. Crissman, and at one time a well known resident of Bellefonte, came over from DuBois this week to look up his numerous friends and incidently take in the the business men's picnic.

County Commissioners Woodring and Dunlap visited Philipsburg, on Saturday last, where they met the commissioners of Clearfield county and arranged for the repairing of the sidewalk approaches to a bridge over a stream which divides Clearfield and Centre counties.

Engineer Edward Whittaker, accompanied by his wife and three daughters, are this week visiting Mr. Whittaker's sister, Mrs. William Desendorf, at Altoona. While there Mr. Whittaker will participate in the dedication of the new Shriner's Temple, at that place.

Commissioners Clerk E. J. Williams, Captain Hugh S. Taylor and Edward Schofield are this week in Baltimore, attending the national convention of the Moose. They represent the Bellefonte lodge of this rapidly growing order.

Captain Charles Taylor, of the Pennsylvania Industrial school at Huntingdon, arrived in Tyrone on Sunday and arrested an escaped convict. Captain Taylor is an old National Guardsman, and served with the troops during the Spanish-American war and knows how to run a man down when he has escaped from an institution like the Huntingdon reformatory. Tyrone Herald.

W. H. Goss, of Pine Grove Mills, one of the "boys in blue" in Civil war days, was a genial visitor to "The Republican" office yesterday for the purpose of becoming enrolled as a subscriber. Mr. Goss attended the Baileyville picnic, on Saturday, last, and fully intended taking in the business men's picnic, on Tuesday, but with the withdrawal of the special train from Pine Grove Mills that morning, he was forced to forego the pleasure of attending the latter event.

Sheriff W. E. Hurley last week spent several days on that fine farm of his in Bedford county. His farm covers 107 acres of land and this year's crop is a record-breaker. Sheriff Hurley says that this year the yield includes 500 bushels of wheat, 800 bushels of oats and 2,000 bushels of corn, to say nothing of a nice lot of clover seed. Like many others, Sheriff Hurley is a believer in a liberal use of lime on the farm and while away he placed an order for 1500 bushels to be used this year. Speaking of Mr. Hurley's farm recalls an amusing incident of his campaign for Sheriff. Knowing that if his Democratic opponents should learn that he owned such a nice farm they would magnify it into a 10,000 acre proposition and also endeavor to show that he was a sort of trust magnate and that he, therefore, should allow some poor man to have the office of Sheriff, he said nothing about it. It wasn't the fault of the Democrats that they didn't find out about his farm, for they hunted high and low for anything that might be warped into an argument against his candidacy. They learned that he at one time had resided in Blair county, but that was as far as they got. They didn't know that he was born in Huntingdon county, later removed to Bedford county, where he bought the farm in question, and subsequently located in Blair county before making his home in Philipsburg. Knowing that the Democrats were after him, Bill wisely said nothing about his farm. The Democrats never found it out until he told them—which was after the election.

J. Mac. Curtin, of Pittsburg, is visiting the home of his mother, Mrs. H. R. Curtin.

Miss Mary Strunk returned home last week from Baltimore, where she visited for two weeks.

Mrs. A. O. Furst returned home yesterday after a four weeks' visit to Lake Mohonk, N. Y., New Haven, Conn., and Philadelphia.

W. R. Gainfort, 108 East Curtin Street, begs to announce that his next Shorthand Class will be open on Thursevening, Sept. 1st. Those desiring to join will please apply at once.

T. B. Budinger and the several members of his family made an automobile trip from Snow Shoe to Bellefonte on Tuesday morning and then proceeded to Hecla Park, where they took in the business man's picnic.

Dr. F. K. White and Charles Rowland were among the Philipsburgers who were at the business men's picnic to see their home team licked on Tuesday. Yesterday's game, at Philipsburg, gave them a chance to smile the other way.

Misses Ruth and Louise Seymour, of New York, arrived in Bellefonte on Saturday evening and are visiting their uncle, James Noonan, at the Brant House. Their brother, Frank, is expect to arrive here today.

A very pleasant visitor to "The Republican" office yesterday was J. A. Pratt, of Unionville, who has been spending his summer vacation at that place. Mr. Pratt is a student at the Princeton theological seminary and will return to that institution in the fall. He is a valued subscriber to "The Republican" and while here yesterday advanced his subscription another year.

The work of the Lock Haven State Normal School is, primarily, to prepare teachers for the public schools. In this work, it has been eminently successful. Its graduates today are college professors, Normal school teachers, County superintendents, high school and grade teachers. It also maintains a college preparatory department, and departments of Music, Elocution, Art, and Business. The fall term opens September 6th. Send for illustrated catalog.

Every now and then the types go on an outing and get things all topsy-turvey. Last week we tried to tell about a call to this office by S. F. Walter of Kansas City, Missouri, and somehow or other the types insisted on saying that it was not Mr. Walter but Mr. Walker. Of course, it wasn't Mr. Walker at all. It was Mr. Walter and if the types get it wrong this time we will begin to believe that the Walkers are always trying to "butt in."

OSCEOLA STILL LEADS

Bellefonte Continues in Second Place in Mountain League.

STANDING OF CLUBS.

| | Won | Lost | Pct. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Osceola | 21 | 12 | 636 |
| Bellefonte | 19 | 15 | 559 |
| Clearfield | 16 | 13 | 552 |
| Philipsburg | 8 | 24 | 250 |

Oeceola and Philipsburg, the leaders and tailenders of the Mountain League, won yesterday, Bellefonte and Clearfield going down to defeat. After walloping Philipsburg twice on Tuesday, Bellefonte visited the town of the coal miners yesterday and were trounced, 6—3. Osceola trimmed Clearfield, 12—4.

Osceola continues to sit on the top rung n the league ladder. Had both Bellefonte and Clearfield won yesterday Bellefonte would have been within striking distance of first place. Bellefonte continues in second place, leading Clearfield by but four points.

Today, at 2.30 o'clock, Bellefonte will play an exhibition game with the crack Tyrone team. This will be Tyrone's first appearance here this year.

The schedule of league games for the remainder of the season has been changed since last week's issue of "The Republican," The revised schedule is as follows:

Aug. 26.
Clearfield at Osceola
Aug. 27.
Clearfield at Bellefonte (2 games)
Osceola at Philipsburg
Aug. 29.
Osceola at Bellefonte
Clearfield at Philipsburg
Aug. 30.

Aug. 31.
Bellefonte at Osceola
Sept. 1.
Bellefonte at Osceola
Philipsburg at Clearfield
Sept. 2.
Bellefonte at Philipsburg (2 games)
Sept. 3.
Clearfield at Philipsburg

On Monday, September 5, Labor Day, Bellefonte will play an exhibition game here with the fast Altoona Athletic Association team.

Mammoth Barn Burned.

Lightning destroyed the barn and damaged other buildings on A. S. Kimmel's farm, near Orwigsburg. The barn was the largest in the anthracite region, and the loss amounts to $10,000. All the season's crops, farm utensils and some live stock were burned.

Williams Family Reunion.

The annual reunion of the Williams family will be held on Saturday, next, in John Q. Miles' grove, near Martha. While this event always attracts a large crowd it is expected that the attendance this year will be greater than ever.

STATE OF IOWA

OFFICE OF AUDITOR OF STATE

DES MOINES

John L. Bleakly, Auditor
J. H. Brynes, Deputy

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT
C. S. Brykit, Chief Clerk

Mr. James E. Norton,
Reading, Pa. Aug. 2, 1910

Dear Sir:--The Royal Union Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Des Moines, Iowa, was organized March 15, 1886, more than 24 years since, and has been in continuous operation since that date.

Its officers are all men of sterling executive ability, and its president and secretary are personally prominent in Iowa, the former having been governor of the state. I believe they have the confidence of every citizen.

In this state the policies of an Iowa life insurance company must be valued each year, and the company is required to keep deposited with the state sufficient securities to cover all the outstanding policies. I am now holding $2,531,650.11 belonging to this company for such purposes.

Very truly yours,
CSB. John L. Bleakly, Aud. of St.
